The Liquor Question

A Paper Read Before the Church Congress at Halifax, N. S. September 1910.

By Rev. Rural Dean Dibb,
Vicar of Napanee, Ont.

"Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright, for at the last it stingeth like a serpent and biteth like an adder."—Solomon. Old words! Spoken nearly 3000 years ago! And lo! they are now abundantly proven by the experiments of modern science. It is, I think, high time that the Church should recognize that there is no greater hindrance to her progress than the Liquor Traffic. In the past, we have been so scrupulously anxious to be fair and just to all classes, so careful to avoid all manichean and other unreasonable extremes, that the Anglican Church has come to be regarded, rightly or wrongly, as the friend and champion of the poor persecuted liquor-seller. I desire that this position shall be reversed, and that this church shall come to be recognized as the uncompromising foe of the whole business. On the one hand, it cannot be denied that the Liquor Traffic as at present carried on is a gigantic evil. On the other hand, it cannot be successfully contended that it has ever been of any benefit to the commonweal. Under these circumstances it is difficult to understand how it has been tolerated so long. Last year $76,817,649 were spent for liquor in this Canada of ours. Think what that means! It means more than $11 per head for every man, woman and child in this Dominion. Take an average family of five persons. They must be taxed $55 a year for strong drink. Think what $55 a year means for the average family!! If a flood should do $76,000,000 damage in this country it would be regarded as a staggering disaster, and we should appeal to Europe for aid. Then think of the thousands of families who, thank God, never spend $1 a year for liquor. I suppose that half the families in Canada are in that happy case. That means that the other half are spending at least $100 a year for something which I think I shall presently show you is entirely valueless to the human system. I know that many of our Anglican laity are spending from fifty cents to one dollar a day for drinks, and many others who are distinctly moderate drinkers, who never go into bars, and who never get drunk are spending on an average $1 a day for wines, etc. in their own homes. They would strongly deny it no doubt. But if they would keep account of it they would be surprised to find how little poetry there is in this statement. Is it any wonder that our urgent missionary work in the west must languish for lack of funds. I do not wish to go into the political aspect of this question. But one word about the supposed loss of revenue. It is sufficient to say that the cost of the traffic to the state far exceeds the revenue from it. The Lord Chief Justice of England declares that nine-tenths of the crime of England and Wales could be traced to drink. Rev. Canon Horsley, formerly Chaplain to Clerkenwell Prison, says 75 per cent.

effects on the muscular system, a strengthening and a weakening effect. During the first brief stage after reception the strengthening effect is predominant, the alcohol being used as a food by the exhausted body. But as soon as this first brief stage is over the weakening effect becomes apparent the alcohol probably acting injuriously upon the nervous system. Similar results have been obtained by all other experimenters without one exception. For example, Dr. Hellsten after an extensive series of experiments at Helsingfors concludes thus. Almost immediately after being taken into the system alcohol raises the working capacity of the muscles. But from twelve to forty minutes later a lowering sets in, and this state lasts at least two hours. Another experimenter says that the stimulating effect of alcohol on the average person lasts about nineteen minutes, and the succeeding depression lasts from two to twenty-four hours. Then as to series four and five, the results after a meal with a little alcohol were eight per cent. less than after a meal without alcohol. The conclusion is that a moderate amount of alcohol with a meal produces a very considerable lowering of the capacity for muscular work. The wide spread notion that moderate drinking with meals helps a labourer to do his work is false.

Similar careful experiments were carried out by Dr. Martin Mayer, at Heidelberg, in regard to writing, which of course combines mental and muscular processes. The apparatus used was the so-called Writing-balance, invented by Prof. Emil Kraepelin. Dr. Mayer experimented on himself. The criticism that the results might thereby be influenced by pre-conceived notions is invalidated says Dr. Mayer by the fact that at that time I had not studied the literature as to the effects of alcohol. The tests were made on Sept. 8, 10, 12, and 14. Then the Doctor abstained from alcohol until Oct. 10, and conducted the same experiments all over again with increased doses of alcohol. The result found was that alcohol invariably retards the process of writing to a very considerable extent, and the greater the doses the greater the retardation. So the widespread notion that a drink braces one up and makes one do such work faster is shown to be false.

MODERATE DRINKING AND THE HANDICRAFTS.

A typesetter's work while partly physical, also involves the mental faculties very largely. Prof. Aschaffenberg experimented with four experienced professional typesetters all of whom had been moderate drinkers for years. The experiment extended over four days. Monday and Wednesday no alcohol was given, but on Tuesday and Thursday a little over one ounce was administered in the form of Greek wine about fifteen minutes before the experiment. Printed copy was used to avoid difficulties of manuscript and the men were not told the results until the whole series of tests had been completed. As might be expected the four men were not all equally affected by the alcohol. The results were shown in the number of ems actually set up. It is interesting to notice that the men all thought that they could work faster and better with alcohol than without, but the results showed that J. L. lost nothing on Tuesday and only 1.4 per cent. on Thursday. C. H. lost 3.6 per cent. on Tuesday and 9.9 per cent. on Thursday. R. G. lost 7.6 per cent. on Tuesday and 9.3 per cent. on Thursday.

mitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in section nine of "The Ontario Voters' Lists Act" the copies required by said section to be so transmitted or delivered of the list, made pursuant to said Act, of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at elections for members of the Legislative Assembly, and at Municipal Elections; and that the said list was first posted up at my office in Richmond, on the 6th day of Sept., 1910, and remains there for inspection.

And I hereby call upon all voters to take immediate proceedings to have any errors or omissions corrected according to law.

ABRAM WINTERS,
Clerk of said Municipality.

west must languish for lack of funds. I do not wish to go into the political aspect of this question. But one word about the supposed loss of revenue. It is sufficient to say that the cost of the traffic to the state far exceeds the revenue from it. The Lord Chief Justice of England declares that nine-tenths of the crime of England and Wales could be traced to drink. Rev. Canon Horsley, formerly Chaplain to Clerkenwell Prison, says 75 per cent. The Massachusetts Bureau of Labor Statistics found by careful investigation 84 per cent. Fifty per cent. of insanity among males, and 20 per cent. among females, 40 per cent. of pauperism, and 40 per cent. of deserted and destitute children are the averages from the same cause. I have not time to go into these statistics in detail. But they are found to be practically the same in all civilized countries, with the one happy exception of Norway. The wine-drinking of France, the beer-drinking of Germany, and the mixed drinks of the United States, all tell the same sad story.

I shall not dwell however on the devastations of drunkenness, nor on the horrors of its homes. The evil results of the Liquor Traffic are written in letters large enough, and in colors lurid enough to be known and read of all men. Unless it can show some wonderful counter-balancing benefits which it has conferred on the race, I think a good case has been made out for its transportation to penal servitude for life.

In the past it has been a generally received opinion that a moderate use of alcohol was beneficial as an aid to digestion, a stimulant to old age, and a healthful, or at least harmless, solace amid the cares and trials of this mortal life. In view of the actual results of careful scientific experiments this opinion is no longer tenable. Even the most sparing use of alcohol, with or without food means a diminution of efficiency in any muscular or mental exercise. Any golfer will tell you that even one glass of whiskey and soda at lunch, the effect of which is entirely imperceptible will put him off his putt for that afternoon. Any marksman will tell you that one glass of alcoholic beverage taken before going on to the ranges means giving away the match. All this is scientifically demonstrated by the experiments of Prof. Paul Dubois, and Dr. L. Schnyder, at Berne, Switzerland. Tests were made of one of the best trained muscles of the human body, the index-finger of the right hand. The apparatus used was the celebrated ergograph invented by Angelo Mosso, and improved by Dubois. A weight on a string over a pulley was raised and lowered twelve times with intervening rests of one minute. The experiments were made partly on Prof. Dubois but mostly on Dr. Schnyder, who was not unaccustomed to the effects of alcohol being used to taking a moderate allowance of wine with his meals.

Five series of experiments were made. To eliminate all accidental factors each series was spread over ten days and was held at about twelve noon, four hours after a meal. In the first series no food or alcohol was administered. In the second thirty grams of tropon (an easily digested nitrogenous food for sick people) was given fifteen minutes before hand. In class three a moderate quantity of alcohol, equal in heat value to the tropon, viz. two-thirds of a cupful of Bordeaux wine was administered without food. Series four was held after an ordinary meal without alcohol, and series five after an ordinary meal with alcohol namely, one tumblersful of Bordeaux wine.

The results were automatically recorded by the machine. In the first three series the work done at first on a little alcohol was shown to be slightly more than the amount done on nothing. But at the last there was actually more work done on nothing than on a little alcohol. The conclusion is that a little alcohol taken on an empty stomach has two distinct by the alcohol. The results were shown in the number of ems actually set up. It is interesting to notice that the men all thought that they could work faster and better with alcohol than without, but the results showed that J. L. lost nothing on Tuesday and only 1.4 per cent. on Thursday. C. H. lost 3.6 per cent. on Tuesday and 9.9 per cent. on Thursday. R. G. lost 7.6 per cent. on Tuesday and 9.3 per cent. on Thursday. Poor F. S. lost 9.7 per cent. on Tuesday and 11.9 per cent. on Thursday. As typesetting is paid for by measure of work done, any loss of efficiency means loss of pay. To lose 10 per cent. of one's working efficiency in these days of strenuous competition is a pretty serious matter, and the supposedly harmless glass of beer a day is seen to be a very expensive luxury. Moreover the man whose efficiency was least affected by alcohol was the only one of the four who did not habitually drink beer on week days, but only on Sundays, and the man who was most affected was the one who was accustomed to drink four glasses every week-day and eight or ten on Sundays. Of course all the men abstained during the experimental period. Notice too that the losses on Thursday were greater than on Tuesday. This can only mean that the effects of alcohol are cumulative, and the widespread notion that moderate drinking helps an artisan in his daily work is shown to be false. Of course there are alcoholic degenerates who are incapacitated from any work if liquor is withheld from them. But organic degeneracy from heavy drinking is not our present theme. We are only considering the effects of moderate drinking on the moderate drinker.

Very many more such experiments might be cited—experiments conducted by different scientists with different subjects and in different countries—all taking the utmost care to eliminate or allow for accidental factors, and all without exception showing similar results. These experiments covered such processes as simple addition, receiving of telegraphic messages, reading railway signals through rapidly opening and closing shutters, memorization, as well as various muscular processes. They all point with overwhelming force to the one conclusion that the habitual use of alcohol, even in such moderation as a pint of beer a day, is inevitably accompanied by loss of efficiency.

An interesting account of these experiments may be found in McClure's magazine for October and December 1908, and March 1909, to which I am much indebted.—F. T. D.

May we not believe that the God of our Fathers, who spoke in times past by the prophets, and has now given us a final revelation in matters spiritual by His Son, is speaking to us now in matters physical and psychological by these patient investigators of modern science.

And what is new proven by science has long been discerned by business instinct. The railways and other large employers of labour, quite uninfluenced by moral considerations, have for some years discriminated against users of alcohol, and one drink while on duty is held to be a good reason for dismissal.

Now the Life Insurance Companies are also getting wise. One large company in New York seeks to guard the lives of its policy holders as well as to insure them. From time to time it issues a Health Bulletin, giving special attention to preventable diseases. It's latest issue is devoted to the consideration of "ALCOHOL AND THE DEATH RATE." From this I now quote.—"By reason of its poisonous effects alcohol is responsible for no small share of the mortality rate. In view of the widespread temperate use (so-called) of Alcohol we have endeavoured to consider this subject in no narrow or partisan spirit, but solely from the scientific and practical standpoint just as we would any other cause tending to increase the cost of life insurance. Alcohol is useful in science and the arts. It is a good fuel and can be burned in a certain kind of stove without the formation of clinkers, and without injury to the stove. If the stove had a brain, a nervous system, kidneys and a liver

the results would be different.
Alcohol can be burned in the human body and will temporarily produce energy, also clinkers. But it exacts a heavy toll for this service. The man who thinks he can compete with a stove in burning alcohol is making a very great mistake. He is outclassed.

I will now close my case with the evidence of three witnesses whose testimony will be of some value.

Sir Victor Horsley declares that as a drug, alcohol is practically valueless.

Sir Christopher Laking avers that there is no conceivable case in medicine where alcohol would be of any great use.

MANY STRANGE TALES OF THE CANADIAN WEST.

One Member of Prospecting Party Predicted His Own Death by Drowning.

Many a curious tale has been told by adventurous travelers when in pre-settlement days they penetrated the vast solitudes of prairie, forest or mountain valley, writes W. J. Barclay, in Chambers' Journal. In the Summer of 1862 there was a great rush in the newly discovered gold mines of Cariboo. A party of over a hundred gold-seekers from Ontario and Quebec made the journey overland via St. Paul, Fort Garry, the prairies, and across the Rockies by the Leatherhead Pass. Descending the Fraser on rafts and in canoes, they found their greatest trials in its tumultuous waters, more than one life being lost in the rapids of the Grand Canon. The circumstances attending the death of a Torontonian named Carpenter were singular. His party consisted of three other men from the same city—Messrs. Fletcher, Hancock and Alexander. When they arrived at the rapids they explored the canon, it being agreed by lot that Fletcher and Hancock should portage the outfit while Carpenter and Alexander ran the rapids in the canoe. In midstream, the canoe struck a rock and upset. Alexander was a strong swimmer, and managed to reach the shore in safety, but Carpenter appeared stunned, and

SANK IMMEDIATELY.

While exploring the canon his companions had noticed Carpenter making some memoranda in his note-book, which he replaced in an inner pocket of his coat and left on the bank before entering the canoe. His sorrowing companions found the entry to be:—"Arrived at Grand Canon, ran the canon, and was drowned."

The phenomena of Nature sometimes took a tragical, sometimes a puzzling form. During a storm on the prairies near the south branch of the Saskatchewan a rain of fire suddenly descended upon a camp of Cree Indians and burned everything around them. Thirty-two Crees perished in the flames. The ground was burned deeply for a considerable distance, and only one or two of the party who stood near a deep slough were able to save themselves by jumping into the water. It was not a flash of lightning but a rain of fire that lasted for some moments.

There once lay on the lonely summit of a hill far out on the prairie between the North and South Saskatchewan, a huge block of metal. It was a medicine stone of surpassing virtue among the Indians over a vast territory. No band of Crees, Blackfeet or Sarcees would pass in the vicinity without paying a visit to this great medicine stone to lay their offerings upon it to propitiate the mysterious powers dwelling therein. Strange stories were told in the lodges concerning this stone. Old men remembered having heard men say that they were only able to lift it, but that it had grown in weight so that no single man could carry it. It is little wonder that Indian superstition was stirred by this stone. It was not of wet if they can help it, and their lodges are kept closed through superstitious fear of the thunder. Capt. Denny stood for a few seconds watching the scene, considering which lodge to make for. He had made a step or two towards that nearest him, when he seemed to be surrounded with

A BLAZE OF LIGHTNING, and the crash of thunder stunned him and caused him to fall from the shock. A large tree was struck not far off; he could hear the rending of wood. It was several minutes before he was able to look around. But, to his unutterable astonishment and terror, the camp had disappeared. Where a large Indian camp had stood in full view, the voices of its inhabitants distinctly audible, nothing remained in sight but an empty glade surrounded by storm-tossed trees. Little wonder that the captain, before he could gather his wits together, turned and ran, dropping his gun in his course. When lack of breath caused him to sit down on the bank of the river, a quarter of a mile away, he determined to leave his boat and walk to the fort rather than approach the spot again. The fifteen miles made a hard journey, but he arrived about midnight, dragged and worn out. The story told to his brother officers next morning at the breakfast table caused only laughter and chaff as a freak of the imagination. But the captain was firmly convinced of the reality of the experience. He was determined to proceed to the spot again and bring back his boat and gun. With an Indian and Blackfoot interpreter he returned that day, finding no difficulty in locating the place; but it was vacant, without sign of any recent camp. A few rings of stones overgrown with grass showed where an old camp had been many years before. The Indian related how the Blackfeet had surprised and slaughtered a camp of Crees at this spot, and two bleached skulls found among the grass were evident proof of the story.

IN GERMAN AFRICA.

Colonists Talk of Uniting With British South Africa.

Herr Maximilian Harden, and Dr. Carl Peters, the founder of Germany's African empire, have aroused the wrath of the Kaiser by stating publicly that the inhabitants of German South-west Africa are so discontented with German rule that they contemplate abandoning the German flag and joining the British South African Federation.

These colonists are dissatisfied, presumably, with the bureaucratic control which is exercised over them by the officials. One German colony contains more Government officials than white inhabitants and it is a matter of common knowledge that Germans, when they emigrate, go preferably to any place but to one of their own possessions. Dr. Carl Peters declares: "I gave expression to my views during my last visit to German South-west Africa. I had plenty of opportunities to come in contact with all classes of the population, and I can assert that there exists a strong feeling in favor of secession from Germany. Apart from general commercial reasons which induce the colonists of German South-west Africa to emigrate, the bureaucratic policy pursued by the

DOGS ACT AS POLICEMEN

HAVE DECREASED CRIME ON THE CONTINENT.

Largest Cities and Towns in Europe Find That Police Dogs are Invaluable.

It is now many years since Continental nations realized the advantages to be gained by employing dogs in ordinary police work. As the subject in all its different branches is one of which I have made a life-long study, I may be allowed, perhaps to speak with some degree of authority on the valuable work which these sagacious animals are doing throughout, practically, the whole of Europe, writes a London correspondent.

Some eighteen months ago I went abroad and made a careful study of the systems at the training establishments in Germany, France and Belgium, and I came away convinced that the effect of dogs with the police is to decrease crime enormously.

In Paris, Berlin and Brussels, as well as six hundred other towns on the Continent, the authorities testify to the fact that crime has decreased by no less than thirty-five per cent. since the introduction of police dogs. So pleased are the municipal authorities of Berlin that only a few weeks ago they voted a sum of 27,000 marks ($6,750) for the increase of the training establishment in that city.

BURGLARIES CEASE.

In Brunswick, during the month of January, 1903, there were thirteen burglaries, in February twelve and in March and April seven. Nine months later, through the introduction of police dogs, there were no burglaries, and the animals were moved out towards the suburbs, where fruit is largely grown, the trees and shrubs affording welcome "cover" for undesirable, and this had the effect of lowering a number of thefts in the most surprising manner. The report of the inspector states that not only have the number of crimes against property diminished, but also that charges of assault on the police have practically disappeared.

MEDIUM SIZED DOGS.

A word or two now about the dogs themselves. The character possessed by the different breeds is clearly defined by Nature herself, but to embody the necessary traits in one animal was at first no easy matter. Very large and very small dogs were put out of the running at once. St. Bernards and Newfoundlanders have too much weight of their own to carry to be sufficiently active.

For saving life in the water the Newfoundland, of course, is splendid, but this qualification is hardly the business of the ordinary police dog. Great Danes are in some way an exception to the rule, as they are both powerful and active, while small dogs are without sufficient size and speed.

Setters, pointers, and greyhounds are too much inclined to go after game; bulldogs are useless, so we must come down to the sheep dog and Airedale. The latter is used much in France, Germany, and Austria, while the former cannot be ignored, as he possesses very sharp senses, and will not attack without

DUST AND GERMS IN PIANOS.

Also Moths, Owing to the Neglect of the Average Family.

After the high shelves in dark closets the worst place for dirt in a well ordered house is the interior of the piano.

The piano maker when he sells a new instrument warns the purchaser to keep it not only closed but covered when not in actual use or being aired, though he well knows that in nine houses out of ten where music is not a sacred thing his injunctions will be disregarded. A list of things taken out of the ordinary domestic piano of commerce at the periodical cleanings would hardly be believed.

Families of living mice have been found by the piano cleaner, and perhaps families of even larger animals. A piano tuner found in an instrument a quart of hickory nuts carried in by squirrels. The family had wondered why the instrument refused to respond to a touch on the keys.

Just plain household dust is taken out of the piano by the quart if the cleanings are not frequent, and a bacteriological analysis of piano sweepings would probably reveal the germs of several diseases. Piano tuners and cleaners catch these diseases sometimes. Modern methods of cleaning have not been fully applied to the domestic piano and the cleaner or tuner is seen laboriously brushing the felt hammers to remove the thick coating of dust that soon accumulates. Piano tuners have discovered that they are more subject to colds in the head than average folk, and some have hit upon the scheme of wearing cotton in the nostrils when at work. The effect is greatly to reduce the frequency of such colds.

Normally careful housewives often wonder why their precautions are insufficient to exclude moths from the house. If they would examine the piano they would sometimes find a solution of the mystery.

Moths are attracted by the congenial gloom and abundant felt inside a piano; perhaps they are fond of music. At any rate the piano is a great breeding place for these household pests, and what the careful housewife saves in clothing she often loses in piano felts by the ravages of the moth. A long neglected piano may be so riddled by moths as to require complete renewal of destructible parts.

Mothers of growing daughters groan in spirit and stop their ears when they behold a dozen young folk gathered about the piano singing songs and rag-time music to the banging accompaniment of an unskilled player, but the resultant damage from mere rough handling is as nothing compared to the ruin wrought by dust and insects when the careless young folks go away leaving the instrument wide open for the entrance of anything with wings or legs.

to this great medicine stone to lay their offerings upon it to propitiate the mysterious powers dwelling therein. Strange stories were told in the lodges concerning this stone. Old men remembered having heard men say that they were only able to lift it, but yearly it had grown in weight so that no single man could carry it. It is little wonder that Indian superstition was stirred by this stone. It was not of this world; it had fallen from heaven. It was, in fact,

A METEORITE.

In the year 1889 the missionary of Victoria, a small settlement north-east of Edmonton, caused the stone to be brought in to the mission. When the Indians heard of the desecration they were loud in expression of their regret, while the old medicine men declared its removal would be followed by war, disease and the disappearance of the buffalo. It is curious as a coincidence that in the following year the plague of smallpox swept over the Saskatchewan country with fearful violence, leaving whole camps of victims to rot unburied on the plains. The plague was accompanied by the afflictions of tribal war, carried on, in spite of the disease, with unparalleled ferocity, while a few short years sufficed for the extermination of the countless buffalo herds. The stone was afterwards shipped to Toronto, where the curious can now see it in the museum of Victoria University. It is also of interest to note that Iron Creek, Alberta, derives its name from this historic stone, for it was near its banks that it reposed so long as a mantle of the red man.

A strange adventure befell Capt. Denny, of the North West Mounted Police, in the summer of 1875. From the fort on Old Man River he took a trip to the foot hills of the mountains, about twenty miles distant, for the purpose of fishing and deer hunting. He was accompanied by an Indian guide. The hunt was successful, both the captain and his guide killing a deer. He sent the Indians back to the fort with the horses loaded with the venison while he inflated brought for the purpose, in which he purposed returning to the fort-fishing on the way. During the morning he made good headway down the river, only once having trouble at a rather nasty rapid, in the middle of which he stuck on a flat stone, and was upset in getting off. He got a thorough wetting before he caught his boat again. About noon the weather began to look threatening, heavy banks of clouds gathering in the north. The thunder's orms along the mountains are usually of short duration, but very severe while they last. When the storm broke the captain sought shelter in a clump of timber on the north bank, and during a lull in its fury he plainly heard the drums beating in an Indian camp, and the accompanying "Haya" mingling with the sound. Leaving his boat drawn up on the shore and safely tied, he made his way towards the sound. The storm came down worse than ever, and the lightning was blinding as he made his way through the timber. In an open glade the Indian camp of about 20 lodges lay before him plainly visible, 20 yards away, with a band of horses grazing on the farther side, the gleam of fires shining through the open entrances of the lodges. This was surprising, as the Indians do not move about in the during my last visit to German South-west Africa. I had plenty of opportunities to come in contact with all classes of the population, and I can assert that there exists a strong feeling in favor of secession from Germany. Apart from general commercial reasons which induce the colonists of German South-west Africa to emigrate, the bureaucratic policy pursued by the German Government toward the colonists is the principal cause of the discontent of the population. After citing various cases of bureaucratic blunders which excited the colonists' resentment, Dr. Peters adds: "Great efforts will be necessary on Germany's part and a policy more adapted to the colonists' interests will be necessary to assure our permanent supremacy over German South-west Africa."

LASH FOR APACHES.

Strong and Growing Demand for This in Paris.

How to protect Paris, France, from the growing Apache evil is the subject occupying the minds of nearly all leading citizens.

Statistics of murders and attempted murders by the type of individual known as the "Apache" show that they have rapidly increased of late. In August crimes of this kind committed with the revolver were nearly seventeen per cent. more numerous than were those in July.

M. Lepine, the Prefect of Police, says that the law, as it exists, would suffice for the suppression of this evil if it were fully enforced. He blames the leniency of the Judges. Light imprisonment and lighter fines are the usual punishments for many dreadful crimes.

Strong and growing opinion demands that whipping for the Apache type of criminal be applied in French prisons as it is in English ones. M. Raynaud, a deputy from Charente, announces that he will take the initiative in favor of the lash as a legal means of punishment.

PRISON FOR FRAUDS.

Fortune Telling in Germany was a Well Patronized Industry.

Some 2,000 prophetesses are shaking in their shoes in Germany. So far are they from being without honor in their native town that their clients sometimes have to wait for hours before they are admitted into the inner sanctuary where the cards reveal their secrets.

But now their golden days are past, for the police are on their tracks. To get a test case they recently raided the temple of one of these modern Pythesses in the north of Berlin. Two ladies were closeted with the reader of the oracles, three others sat patiently waiting their turn in the ante-room. They were not members of the classes to which crass ignorance and superstition are supposed to be peculiar, but had come from the fashionable quarters of the West End in carriage and motor-cars.

Greatly to their consternation the clients of the prophetess were obliged themselves to make revelation of their names and addresses. Nor were they comforted by the intimation that in all probability they would be required to appear in open court and help demonstrate at once the imposture of the fortune teller and the folly of their own credulity.

small dogs are without sufficient size and speed.

Setters, pointers, and greyhounds are too much inclined to go after game; bulldogs are useless, so we must come down to the sheep dog and Airedale. The latter is used much in France, Germany, and Austria, while the former cannot be ignored, as he possesses very sharp senses, and will not attack without reason. With little training a sheep dog can track a fresh line of scent; he possesses wonderful hearing, and is quite a mistake to say he is devoid of "nose."

The best police dogs, however, are a mixture of sheep dog, Airedale and retriever, and well-trained animals of this kind can be obtained for from three to five pounds.

IN ENGLAND.

In England efforts to induce Scotland Yard to try police dogs have been unavailing, but "while there's life there's hope," and we may yet see these useful animals employed in England with the same measure of success as they are abroad.

MUST CARRY REVOLVERS.

This is the Law in the Kingdom of Montenegro.

While in most civilized countries of the world the carrying of weapons is strictly forbidden to civilians, in the new-fledged kingdom of Montenegro it is obligatory. It is a legal requirement, moreover, that every chamber of the revolver should be loaded save one, the empty chamber being for the purpose of enabling its bearer to have just a second or two of reflection before proceeding to slaughter. So strict is this rule that King Nicholas, when out walking or riding, will often stop any of his subjects whom he may encounter, and demand to examine his revolver; and woe betide the man if it is not found loaded, as demanded by statute and custom, and ready for instant use. The King is on such occasions quite as likely as not to inflict personal castigation. In fact his methods of government are extremely patriarchal; and when on a certain occasion he found one of his lieges promenading about the streets of Cetinje holding an umbrella over his head to shield himself from the glare of the sun, he promptly proceeded to seize it and break it over the man's head, demanding, in tones of indescribable scorn, "how he, a hero, dared to carry a woman's sunshade." For, theoretically, all Montenegrins are heroes. They all claim to be, and a good many of them are, entitled to the popular definition.

THE VOICE TEST.

A well-dressed man entered a florist's shop, threw down a bill, and said he wanted some flowers to take home. He was very unsteady, and had evidently been looking on the wine when it was red. The flowers apparently were intended as a domestic peace-offering.

The florist picked out a dozen chrysanthemums, and the customer started to leave.

At the door he hesitated. "I shav," he said, thickly, "watch these flowers called?" "Chrysanthemums."

The customer shook his head. "Got to have something easier than that," he said. "Gimme a dozen pinks."

Big Excitement Over German and British Arrests.

Behind the excitement caused by the recent arrest of spies in Germany and England there is an interesting story. Extensive work of this nature is carried on in all European countries by officers of the rival armies and navies.

It is well known to the English press, but it has not been published, that the two Englishmen laid by the heels at Borkum by the German authorities are officers of social prominence on the active list of the British navy. The Admiralty solemnly affirms that the two are "under leave of absence to study language abroad." The idea that they are sent on a mission of espionage is indignantly repudiated.

Their influential relatives brought pressure on the British authorities soon after their arrest to take retaliatory action. The reply was that it would be easy to arrest forty German spies at work in England but that it was not considered expedient. Stronger influence was brought to bear and the authorities finally agreed to take one hostage, and so Lieut. Helm was arrested at Portsmouth, and he was committed for trial on a felony charge.

According to the records of the German War Department he too was on leave, for the purpose of studying English in England. As a matter of fact hundreds of German officers have gained by similar methods almost as full knowledge of all British fortifications as the English occupants themselves possess. It has never heretofore been thought worth while to interfere with them.

The British authorities have not undertaken to get similar information in regard to German defences to anything like the same extent, but they have been making efforts recently to inspect the extensive naval works and fortifications under construction on the islands off the German coast, and that country resents it.

There are a variety of opinions as to what the result will be. There is no doubt that if the British officers in custody in Germany are severely treated similar treatment will be extended to Lieut. Helm and perhaps others of his kidney who can be easily captured. It is more probable that both countries will go through the farce of condemning the prisoners and then after a short delay both sides will extend royal clemency.

TESTED AND TRUE.

The man who does his level best isn't going down hill.

A full course in the school of experience lasts a lifetime.

Learning without a little common-sense is a dangerous thing.

A nest-egg in the bank will keep a man from brooding over his troubles.

If we all thought twice before we spoke conversation would be terribly slow.

When you like to do a thing it is preposterous for other people to think there is harm in it.

TEA IN AUSTRIA.

"The Austrians probably use a higher average quality of tea than any other people in the world, except, perhaps, the Russians, and these two nations prepare their tea for drinking in a more intelligent way than others."

PETS OF THE RICH FOLK

SOME SOCIETY WOMEN DESIRE STRANGE PETS.

Sarah Bernhardt Had a Tame Leopard—Countess of Warwick's Ant-Eater.

Those who lead lives of luxury desire strange pets. Cats and dogs have palled on them.

In England the aristocracy have long learned to love peculiar pets. In America the taste is spreading. The family of Warner Van Norden, the New York banker, has a zebra that has been broken to harness like a pony. He is very beautiful, and there is always a delightful possibility that he will break loose.

The famous Countess of Warwick has many peculiar pets. First is her South African ant-eater. Surely this is the strangest of strange pets, and not one which would naturally appeal to the human heart, and yet a gentler, more affectionate and devoted little creature never lived than this pet of Lady Warwick's. When she talks to him in loving words the little thing wiggles joyfully and sinks his tiny beads of eyes that seem to laugh with delight. His coat is soft and woolly and of a deep rich black. With his long nose he swiftly rids the lawns and gardens of ants and insects. He has a strange waddling sort of motion when he walks or runs, and he is a very droll sight trailing about after his beloved mistress. When he sleeps he curls up in a perfectly tight ball and folds his long nose over his paws.

BABY ELEPHANT.

The Countess' small elephant is another of her devoted pets. He is of an undersized variety, and the Countess adopted him when he was very young. He is extravagantly fond of her, and performs all manner of tricks which she has taught him.

On her arm the Countess often carries a tiny marmoset. He is a strange, wise, loving little animal with something about all his ways and expression that is wistfully sad.

Sarah Bernhardt for many years had as a pet a full grown leopard. It was always gentle and submissive with its mistress, but to her servants and to strangers it was liable to be savage at any time. It was the joy of the great Frenchwoman's heart, however, and she kept it with her as long as it lived.

GENTLE AS A DOG.

The Princess Troubetskoi, formerly Amelie Rives, who lives in Paris, has a beautiful tame wolf. It was given to her by her Russian husband's family when quite a puppy. It is now a gigantic creature of the pale gray variety common to the Russian wilds, and of the ferocious, bloodthirsty sort that terrorize the peasants in remote places. Yet this domesticated wolf is as gentle as a collie, and has something very sweet and lovely about his nature. He accompanies his mistress on her walks in the Bois and runs and races about her but seems always afraid of straying too far. One would naturally suppose that he would try to run away and escape to a life of freedom, but he seems to love his captivity.

GREAT WAR MUST COME

STRIFE BETWEEN BRITAIN AND GERMANY.

The Germans Think It Unavoidable—They Seek Sea Power—Britain Like Rome.

Professor Emil Reich writes to the New York American in part as follows:—

Between Germany and Great Britain there is an antagonism that can be gotten over only by means of armed conflict. There was the same antagonism between Athens and Sparta; between Rome and Carthage; between England and France in the Middle Ages, and up to Waterloo, and between many a minor set of nations.

INEVITABLE.

It has nothing to do with personal likes or dislikes; with the saying of the press; with dynastic differences, or with "racial" views. It is in the nature of things. It is like the conflict between day and night, or between youth and old age. It can be stayed off for a time; it can never be averted altogether.

In Germany every single person has long since been sufficiently convinced, and every able-bodied man is a soldier. Together with his education as an efficient unit for military purposes, he is taught a little history, and the great spirit of an aggressive and growing nation is infused into him.

Many people imagine that Socialism in Germany is a disruptive force, or one that will impede or incapacitate Germany in any attempt at making political moves of a European grandeur. No greater illusion can possibly be indulged in.

SOCIALISM IN GERMANY.

as everywhere else on the Continent, except France, is a purely theoretic force. It yields to the first onslaught of any one of the old historical and real forces on the Continent.

Like ancient Carthage, which could not expand into the interior of uninhabitable Africa, Germany, too, cannot hope to possess much more territory on the fully occupied Continent, and is forced to spread by maritime power. However, Carthage met Rome, that is, a power well knit and strongly organized on land, and very capable on sea. The end was the downfall of Carthage.

Had Rome possessed only sea power Carthage might very well have defeated her. But Rome had land and sea power. Given her sufficient constitution and her two-fold power Rome would not be worsted in the long run.

The Germans, if victorious over the British fleet, can very well invade England, and hold it for some time. The British, with the present organization of their army, could never think of invading one town of Germany.

JIU JITSU RESTORES LIFE

MARVELLOUS EXHIBITION BY AN EXPERT.

Resuscitates a Victim of Apoplexy by a Very Simple Operation.

An extraordinary story of the resuscitation of a man apparently dead by means of jiu-jitsu is printed by the Japan Advertiser, which declares that, though jiu-jitsu has attracted much attention throughout the world as a marvellous art of self-defence, it has not yet received the attention it deserves as a means of restoring to life persons who are victims of shock, concussion of the brain, apoplexy, or drowning.

It has long been asserted that this curious science has secrets which are imparted only to those who have attained a very high degree of proficiency, and they are pledged not to reveal their knowledge. It is believed that certain experts know how to lend a human being by little more than a touch. Be that as it may the following story is well vouched for.

MARVELLOUS EXHIBITION.

A young conductor on the Tokio street railway suddenly fell apparently lifeless on the platform of his car suffering from apoplexy. Every possible means of resuscitation was tried without avail.

The man remained livid, without any apparent respiration or pulsation, and was on the point of being given up for dead when one Iura Hidikichi, who is a jiu-jitsu expert, happened to pass by, and, lifting the lifeless body up, tried upon it the jiu-jitsu method of resuscitation.

The effect was as instantaneous as it was marvellous. The patient immediately regained full consciousness, to the great amazement of the onlookers who had crowded around.

HOW THEY DO IT.

Broadly speaking the method employed is as follows: The operator kneels on one knee immediately behind the patient, whom he lifts to a semi-sitting posture, placing his (the operator's) knee between and slightly below the patient's shoulder blades in the cardiac region, then brings his hands forward over the patient's chest; and then gives them a powerful jerk backward. If any life remains the effect is instantaneous, not only respiration and pulsation, but full consciousness, being restored. There are, however, details in regard to this treatment which cannot be learned.

Anna Held, the actress, for a year and a half had a young lynx cub as a pet. He was given to her when very young, and had to be fed on a bottle. #### SLEEP FOR TOILERS.

European Countries Provide Rest Period for Factory Workers.

In twelve European countries no woman will be allowed to work in any industrial undertaking after ten o'clock at night.

Such is the main provision of the Berne International Convention respecting the prohibition of nightwork for women in industrial employment which, by consent of the signatories, is to come into operation on January 14th, 1912.

The object of the signatory states is to facilitate the development of the industrial protection of workpeople by the adoption of common provisions.

The twelve countries which have adopted this far-reaching reform are Great Britain, Austria and Hungary, Belgium, France, Germany, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Switzerland, Italy and Sweden.

The convention lays down that the night rest provided shall be a period of eleven consecutive hours at least.

The new regulation will not affect domestic servants, clerks, secretaries, shorthand writers, typists, governesses, doctors, nurses or any woman employed in a professional or business occupation.

Workers in factories, in dress-making establishments, and box-makers, packers, and those engaged in textile industries will benefit. In certain cases shop assistants will come under the new regulations.

Women who work in jam and pickle factories, in foundries, in match factories, in biscuit bakeries, will also come under the new law.

In the steel pen industry, in metal working, in screw making, in the jewelry trade, and as leather workers, there are more women than men employed.

But those who do their work at home, and who, as a rule, work the longest hours of all for the least money, remain untouched.

A FRIENDLY DRAGON.

Natives of Manchuria Were Afraid of the Automobile.

In Manchuria a motor-car is naturally a fantastic if not a dangerous invention in the eyes of the natives. When Signor Scarioffio and his party stopped their machine at one of the villages for a supply of water for the radiator, the inhabitants fled in terror, and watched the strangers from half-closed windows.

I advance to parley, waving a ruble over my head, he writes in "Round the World in a Motor Car," and at last one man ventures to approach. He takes two or three steps toward me with his eyes fixed on the ruble. At last, by means of a hundred complicated gestures, he is made to understand that the money is not merely a reward for his arrival, but that we require some water.

He turns to the silent crowd, and in a voice full of anger and fury hurls at them a stream of violent invective. The men listen with bowed heads as the tempest passes over them. Then some ten or twenty hurry off, and an instant later there is a row of pails beside the car. The chief, for he certainly is a chief, regards me with a smile full of satisfaction, and points to my pocket, where the ruble has disappeared, and to his own, in which it would find a grateful resting-place.

When Haaga takes from one of the pails the small quantity of water that he requires, the people become more courageous, and approach the car, with their little eyes wide open with astonishment. They are led by a youth who appears to enjoy much authority in the land. The crowd listens with patient attention to his vivacious discourse, which is punctuated by eloquent and convincing arm-play. He evidently explains the mysterious dragon.

Gradually the young Manchurian approaches the tires, and with grim resolution touches them with a finger. The crowd is struck dumb with admiration. He takes another step and fingers the lamps; something like a shiver passes over the crowd. A third step, and he touches the radiator; but unfortunately for him it was still hot, and the experimental scientist burned his hand.

The crowd flees like a herd of surprised antelopes. Soon, however, they return, under the persuasions of the more courageous experimenter, and themselves touch the pneumatics, which fill them with wonder, make grimaces before the lenses of the lamps, which turn their images upside down, and finally, one by one, conscientiously burn their fingers on the radiator.

CAUSE OF APPENDICITIS.

Writing in the current issue of The London Lancet, Dr. Donald Hood advances the theory that appendicitis is infectious. He says: "If the disease is due, as I believe, to the effect of microbe influence, the micro-organism may under certain conditions be conveyed from individual to individual." Dr. Hood dwells at length on the great increase in the number of cases, and points out that within recent years the type of the disease has changed, being now much more virulent than formerly.

They told me of a people who were there in the days of their forefathers, with whom, as their legends declare, they fought a great war. They say they were not white people, and from their general description I should think they were Arabs.

"We found many curious things indicating beyond dispute an ancient civilization. For instance, at one place where I was prospecting we broke into gold workings that must have been thousands of years old. There were great masses of slag, also, such as one finds in the neighborhood of iron foundries, and huge crucibles which had been used for separating gold from dross. Apparently they had worked in a similar manner to ourselves, for there were lumps of slag, the shape of the crucibles, from which the metal had been abstracted by precipitation. Our crucibles are no improvement on those I found there, which were practically indestructible."

COMMENDABLE SELFISHNESS.

Mothers Should Insist on Rights Being Respected.

Selfishness to a certain point is not only allowable, but commendable. The mother who, meaning to be unselfish, allows her husband and children to ride over her roughshod is not only preparing trouble for herself but, still worse, trouble for those whom she is spoiling day by day. She would be doing her duty more truly by her family if she remembered that she, as well as they, had certain rights which must be respected and preferences which must be honored.

A family is a little kingdom, in which the mother and father are sovereigns, who must rule wisely, rendering justice to all—themselves among the number—if the kingdom is to remain happy and prosperous. The mother, as queen, must fit herself to stand comparison with other queens, so that her growing sons and daughters may think proudly and fondly that "no other chap's—or girl's—mother is fit to hold a candle to ours."

Our duty to ourselves begins when we first realize that the world contains an interesting person called "I," and continues as long as that person remains in this troublesome world.

PIGS AS PETS.

Both Men and Women Have Taken Fancy to Them.

The poultryer's assistant, in a certain London district, who has made a pet of a tame goose, which follows him about like a dog, and seems to take the greatest interest in any conversation its owner may have with another person, reminds one of the butcher who made pets of two little black and white pigs. And very proud he was of his black and white twins, as he called them.

A spinster lady of Epping, however, was not content to keep a little pig as a pet. Nothing but heavy porkers would satisfy her. She had two, Tony and Jack, which she allowed to have the run of the house until the authorities interfered in the cause of health. Pig pets are not unknown in society circles, amongst that section of the elite which is ever in search of new novelties and sensations, while some time ago a well-known American actress took her pet pig with her during a shopping excursion in New York.

Along with other regiments of the British army, some of the more famous colonial organizations have had their histories written, in which their varied achievements have been set forth. This honor has at last come to the Northwestern Mounted police of Canada, a regiment which, while it has not had the long and glorious battle field history of some of the line organizations of the mother country, has yet to its credit individual achievements of its members which for bravery, endurance, and disinterestedness have not been surpassed anywhere in the world. While belonging to the constabulary, the Northwestern Mounted police nevertheless form a part of the military service of Canada and are under the strictest army discipline. Their duties—the policing of the great plains and mountain tracts of the dominion—embrace also those of forest ranger, fish and game wardens, the prevention of smuggling, and the keeping open of communication between remote settlements in all seasons.

When it is remembered that less than 700 men at present perform these multifarious and difficult tasks over a territory of two and one-half million square miles and acquit themselves with distinguished success some idea of the efficient service they render may be had. The records of the regiment, as told in the cold language of official reports, convey no hint of the hardships endured, the bravery shown by these men. This history which has been written of them brings out these facts in all their picturesque and thrilling details and also tells us something of the force's personnel. In it as officers or privates are to be found some of the most distinguished names of England. The bitter road of the younger son often leads him to the recruiting office of the N. W. M. P., and more than one representative of noble houses has followed the lonely and hard life of the plains rider in the great north land. When the Earl of Aberdeen visited Fort Macleod during his governorship of the dominion he recognized in the police corporal who brought down his dispatches his own nephew. It is a hard, ill paid life, but a healthy and wholesome one, and the men who follow it administer law with that rigor which makes British justice respected the world over.

The philosophic historian reviewing the character and reign of Wilhelm II will doubtless point out that even the errors, or at any rate some errors, of that redoubtable prince served well his country. Of these unwitting services, the Kaiser's ardent mediaevalism has contributed the most conspicuous, the

PIETY IS NORMAL HEALTH

The Saddest Thing That Could Happen Any One Would Be to Live Without Sorrow.

"Then shall thy light break forth as the morning and thine health shall spring forth speedily."—Isa. lviii. 8.

The people who keep their piety almost perpetually on the operating table usually waste a great deal of time wondering why it seems to be so sickly. The habit of introspection makes the religious hypochondriac. Yet there are so many who measure their piety either according to the degree to which it pains them or pains others.

Just as a growing realization of the influence of our thoughts over our health demands that we shall cease the mournful practice of trading sickly experiences so men are realizing that character is soon blighted in the atmosphere of habitual heart-searchings, complainings and moanings. When men meet only to advertise their ills they part persuaded of the orthodoxy of pessimism.

Sighing over this life as a vale of tears only adds to its gloom, augments the briny stream and wastes the breath that is needed to wage the fight for the brighter day and happier life.

You will find that the spectators do most of the weeping on the field of life. Real grief cuts too deep for idle tears; it strikes us down only to stir us up to keener efforts.

Many a man who is talking of the cross that heaven lays on him who imagines that he is a rare saint because he has unusual sorrow, would increase his wisdom and silence his murmurings if he but looked back to REMEMBER THE FOLLIES, the meannesses, the hypocrisies, the lusts and evil of years now past. He is but reaping as he has sown and the piety of his dotage does not avail to change the law of consequence.

Piety is strength rather than weakness. It is the normal and right rather than the abnormal and the sensational. The pious man is he who is rightly adjusted to his world and is in right relations to the whole of his universe. To him life is a glad thing, because it is part of the divine whole, not something to be endured as passing, to be borne only in the prospect of a speedy release.

When you get to think of all life as being part of the divine plan, to know that life is right because it is divine, you will find that life has a place for real sorrow, and it is not all a glad song without minor chords, not all a spring holiday without clouds of toilsome ways. But sorrow and pain then become not causes of complainings, nor sources of self pity; they take their place as part of life's whole music.

Sorrow has its part to play. The saddest thing that could happen to any would be to live forever without its softening, sweetening, refining touch. That would be to be without knowledge of sympathy, without real insight into the lives about ours, without a sense of the deep places of life. Nothing is more blasting to the real flowers of character than perpetual sunshine.

Pain has its message and discipline for all. It is but the power of sensation at its keenest. It is the means by which we learn the laws and boundaries of life. It marks us from the lower levels of living, and to be insensate to pain is to be as a brute. One could hardly think of a rightly ordered world unless the breach of its laws involved something akin to

PAIN FOR THE GUILTY.

We do not call our friends and neighbors to witness how many loads Providence has laid upon us because we are called to walk through the dark ways of sorrow; we know that this is not a load; it is rather a lesson, a new book which we are opening, a new story we read, a means of enriching our whole selves and an opportunity to be richer to all others.

Men and women who profess to believe in a God of infinite love ought to give evidence of their faith in that love, ought to be willing to take chances on their own destiny, and to leave their Master to look after them, so that they might be free to do his will, to have a share in his work, and to make a new world, in which truths and righteousness should reign.

It is time we ceased worrying over our wings or our future in an asbestos paradise, and in the name of religion begin to take up the plow and the sword, to break up the fallow places of earth, and bring in the day of justice and love. Labor of that sort would give the soul a chance to find life in its fullness.

False Love and True

I.

It was not every day that anyone from the old country visited the mining camp of Boroo, which lay in one of the most desolate districts in North America, so when a stranger rode up, threw himself upon the hospitality of the camp for a space, and talked of London and the coming dissolution of Parliament, and finally produced a copy of a daily paper only six weeks old, the entire community took him to its bosom and made much of him, even to the length of offering—for a fair consideration—to let him join with them instead of going farther afield, possibly to fare worse.

The newspaper passed from hand to hand, many a one, only known there by some rough nickname, feeling a pain keen as a knife go through his heart at the chance mention of some dear relative or friend in its columns.

One man saw an account of a marriage set forth there, and for a moment his eyes grew dim, and all seemed dark for evermore. The bride was a girl he had loved for many a long day, and for whose sake he had worked late and early in the vain hope of making enough money to win her for his wife.

Another man alighted by chance on the "Legal Notices," and his eyes were arrested by the name which of all others was best known to him, for it had been his own until he tumbled into rather a worse scrape than usual, and had to clear out until the trouble had blown over.

In the camp he was called "Tom Matheson," and the advertisement ran as follows:—

Five hundred pounds reward for information as to the present address of Thomas Matheson, nephew of the late Matheson Temple, Esq., of Rockhaven, whose (conditional) heir he is. A similar sum will likewise be paid for satisfactory proof of his death. For further particulars apply Messrs. Grey and Sons, Solicitors, Bedford Row, London, W. C.

Heir to Matheson Temple? The very suggestion of such a thing almost drove him crazy with excitement. His hand shook and his face whitened and flushed alternately as he read the paragraph over and over again.

"Why, Tom, are you ill?" asked a very pretty dark girl, as she came and peeped over his shoulder. "You look so pale and queer!"

With a shout he sprang to his feet, eyes blazing with fury lest she should have found out his secret. Why he should still have wished to preserve it from her even he himself could not have explained just then, but the feeling was there very strongly indeed, so he crushed the paper up into a shapeless ball and asked her gruffly what she wanted.

She looked at him with half-frightened eyes, and sighed. Already she, the beauty of Boroo Camp, realized what a bitter mistake she had made in choosing this man for her husband. She had had the pick of every man there and perhaps had chosen the very

The philosophic historian reviewing the character and reign of Wilhelm II will doubtless point out the errors, or at any rate some errors, of that redoubtable prince served well his country. Of these unwitting services, the kaiser's ardent mediaevalism has contributed the most conspicuous, the latest "indiscretion" being not the least. Unquestionably the tide of popular feeling, already running deep and strong, will be strengthened by his frank challenge as to the basis of government, which we hold, theoretically at least, is the consent of the governed. Wilhelm will have none of this. Direct from God is his appointment to rule. Vox imperatoris, non populi, vox dei est.

It is a striking debate, and if one may judge by the heavy gains in the Socialist vote and the prompt denial of the liberal classes, the German people are not tempted by their admiration for the kaiser's undeniable patriotic devotion and many splendid qualities as man and monarch to concede to him his claim of an exclusive and direct commission from deity. On the contrary, the result is very likely to be a more definite and firmer establishment of constitutionalism. Germany's need for a centralization of power, for unification, has acted against the essential protestantism and individualism of the German character. But this process is thoroughly accomplished. Germany is a compact body to-day, nationalized and highly self-conscious. Therefore, the innate character of the race, the broader influences of modern political and social thought, and the democratic self-respect of the masses of the people are having a freer play upon the German situation than when they were counteracted by the sterner necessities of the era of Bismarck.

A people whose level of intelligence and moral character is as high as that of the Germans, whose race genius is as vital, whose collective achievements are as striking, manifold, and progressive, must believe that Providence judges them as a more fitting agent of the divine purpose and a more likely repository of the divine confidence than any single individual. The basis and scope of constitutionalism should be greatly broadened and clearly defined in Germany. This the great German people owe to themselves. It is to be hoped this latest display of the kaiser's mystical egotism will hasten the advance.

Lesson I. The Wise and Foolish Virgins, Matt. 25. 1-13. Golden Text, Luke 12. 40.

Verse 1. Then—Indicating the viewpoint of the parable. Jesus has just finished speaking of the coming of the Son of man in judgment. At that time events will take place as described in this picture and the one following.

The kingdom of heaven—Considered both as a present and a future reality. The ten virgins represent those who are members of the kingdom as we see it in the visible church, and who are therefore candidates for membership in the kingdom which is to be. So, in some sense, they are all friends of the bridegroom.

Took their lamps—Oriental weddings usually occur after dark, and one of the principal features is the procession, when the friends go forth to meet the bridegroom and accompany him to the house of the bride's parents. All the details are, of course, not capable of interpretation. The number ten, standing for completeness, is the entire number of those who make up the expectant church. Among the Jews, ten constituted a congregation. The lamps stand for the outward profession of church members. To carry a lamp is to announce to the world a definite purpose to be counted among the friends of Christ, who of course is the bridegroom. The bride is not mentioned, simply because the church here is depicted in the wise and witless virgins.

2. Five . . . were foolish—Not bad, but improvident and careless.

3. Took no oil with them—The oil symbolizes all that is inward in the life of the Christian. Without that grace which is infused by the abiding Spirit all the externals of religion, such as philanthropies and creedal confessions; are lacking in warmth and light; indeed, are a cumberance to those who bear these empty lamps and a cause of stumbling to those who may look to them for guidance. Jesus is not speaking of hopeless hypocrites; the foolish had a little oil, that is, a modicum of true religion. But they hadn't any to spare for an emergency, and have been well compared to those of the parable of the seeds who had no depth of earth.

4. The wise took oil in their vessels—The lamps are probably to be understood as torches, consisting of poles wrapped on one end with oily rags. These, of course, would burn only a limited time, and so would need to be replenished with oil from the little earthen jar carried for that purpose. If the inner life is nourished by the Spirit, there will be light for each day and for all that the future may require.

5. The bridegroom tarried—The cause for this delay is not given. The one thing certain is that, though his coming may not be at an hour expected, it is bound to occur.

All slumbered—Both wise and foolish. It was natural, and in the story may be regarded as "a merciful concession to human weakness. It is impossible for creatures such as we are to keep our religious life always at high pressure." Others look upon the figure as meaning the repose of faith, a "serene confidence in God." Sometimes all we can do is to wait, and, if all is in readiness, it is well. But the slumber of the foolish is a false complacency.

Food (Matt. 24. 27, 28, 37). The time for preparation has gone entirely by; now, all that is left is to go forth to meet him.

7. All . . . arose, and trimmed their lamps—Both wise and foolish at the last moment required to do a little trimming. Who of us in the end but will feel the need of, and be grateful for the chance of, a hurried prayer?

8. Our lamps are going out—It is an artist's touch which makes the going out of these lamps coincident with the coming of the bridegroom. A formal religion may barely do to get a man through this life, but it leaves him in darkness when the summons sounds.

9. There will not be enough for us and you—In that day no man will have more than enough for himself. And, even if he should, he would be unable to communicate it to another. Each man must buy for himself. The personal experience of Christ's grace is only for those who are willing to pay the price.

10. While they went away to buy—Why is it that men put off, till some great crisis forces them to it, the thing that they can do so easily at any moment? There is an interval between the warning cry and the actual coming of the bridegroom, but it is not long enough to transact the business for which there has been ample time given before. These five were foolish to the last, for they ought to have considered that the merchants would be asleep at such an hour, and that the bridegroom would have come and gone.

The door was shut—For those that were ready this meant security and the delights of the marriage feast. For those who were not ready it meant banishment and darkness.

11. Lord . . . open to us—Their interest, then, is just in being admitted to the feast. There are many people who want to get to heaven, but they make very meager preparations for it. The man who is genuinely, and not superficially, a friend of the Bridegroom, will pay gladly what it costs to be ready to meet him, and not come clamoring at the gate when it is too late.

12. I know you not—We are not told whether the foolish virgins obtained their oil, or whether the Bridegroom relented and opened the door later. But this solemn word seems to signify, that the belated attempt to fix up so as to look like his friends was unsuccessful. "The mere wish to enter the kingdom, and even the request to be allowed to enter, is of little avail when the prescribed conditions of obtaining admission have been persistently neglected." He is sure to see us as we are, and not as we try to make ourselves appear, and to recognize us as his own by our abiding his coming.

13. Watch therefore—Our Lord knew full well that the church would not be vividly awake upon his return, that "expectancy would flag and ardor burn low." "But well for such as carry in their souls a deep spring of faith and love, and, when the cry is raised at midnight, awaken with glad surprise to greet him."

"Talk about animals having no intelligence," exclaimed an assertive member of a club. "My dog cannot speak, I admit, but he has as much sense as I have." "Very likely," admitted a listener; "but that doesn't prove that the animal is intelligent."

asked her gruffly what she wanted.

She looked at him with half-frightened eyes, and sighed. Already she, the beauty of Boroo Camp, realized what a bitter mistake she had made in choosing this man for her husband. She had had the pick of every man there and perhaps had chosen the very worst.

His state of mind bordered on frenzy. Old Matheson Temple was a millionaire. What were the conditions of the heirship? Tom's conscience warned him not to build too much upon being able to fulfill them until he knew more. If the conditions had anything to do with a spotless reputation or a good character, then he might as well never apply for it. Few men had a worse record than he, if any of those keen-eyed lawyers chose to stir up the muddy waters of his past life.

He could not rest until he knew more—he must get away at once to the nearest town and wire for particulars.

An hour later he was off, vaguely pointing to a death in the obituary column (that of a lady he had never seen or heard of in his life), claiming her for a near relative. "I may have come into money at her death," he said. "I must find out at once."

At the nearest telegraph station he cabled to the solicitors, "Can send you Matheson's address on learning conditions of legacy," and presently came the reply:—

"Left sole heir to a million of money if he marries or offers to marry, Ermytrude Dallas, his late uncle's adopted daughter, within one year of his uncle's death. If he fails to do this the money and the same conditions apply to Richard Temple."

The paper dropped from Tom's hand on to the floor, and he stood staring at it like a man suddenly bereft of reason.

Only six months ago he could have fulfilled that condition; now he had put a millstone round his own neck—he had married an ignorant, pretty girl, the belle of the camp, and was already tired of her, even before he knew that his short-lived infatuation was to cost him a million of money.

His silence was infinitely more terrible than the most violent language would have been; his very soul was reviling his pretty young wife, Nellie. He would have welcomed any death for her, if only it left him free to earn that legacy. Money—a million of money, all his—with a lovely young wife into the bargain, a witty, clever, attractive girl, one he had always cast longing eyes upon, and then hated because she did not favor him!

In sullen passion he rode back to the camp, where the sight of his wife threw him into such a fury that, if it had not been for the knowledge that his fellow-miners would lynch him if he injured her, he might have killed her there and then.

He was questioned as to the result of his journey, but made no verbal reply; his scowling face told its own tale.

He must go on to the end of his life earning a hard livelihood by the sweat of his brow, chained to an illiterate creature who could only with difficulty read and write. Oh! it was intolerable. And Richard Temple, the cousin whom from early boyhood he had hated and feared more than anyone else in the world, would step in and carry off the double prize.

"No, he sha'n't; I'll be shot if he does!" he muttered, as he swallowed down raw, fiery whiskey in dangerous quantities. "There's one way out, and I'll take it. Ermytrude Dallas and the million of money shall be mine."

Very carefully and cunningly did he arrange his plans, and they began with making a great show of affection for Nellie.

His first idea of running away and leaving her was soon put aside as far too risky for the great stake he had in view.

In the first place women were scarce at the camp, and wherever that is the case they are thought much of, and find a champion in every man they meet.

Nellie was a great favorite, and if he deserted her they would go hot upon his track, and then woe betide him! Besides, he knew—who better?—that some of those rough miners belonged to his own rank of life in far-off England. Sooner or later someone would turn up and bring Nellie on the tapis. That would snatch the money away from him with a vengeance and land him in jail for bigamy or fraud.

No; there was a better way out of it than that. Dead men tell no tales, and, once clear of Boroo, he did not mean any ghost from the past to rise up and haunt him.

He began to complain of feeling ill—declared that the work was too hard for him—said if he could sell his share he'd make tracks for a time and set up a store.

The new-comer eagerly snapped at the chance, and the business was soon arranged.

All Tom's belongings were turned into cash, then he and Nellie set off in a borrowed cart which was to be left at an inn at the nearest town, until its owner could ride over and fetch it back.

That owner was a good-looking young man named Jack Denton, of the same class in life as Nellie herself sprang from, and he had always loved her. That she had married Matheson instead of himself was something he had never got over.

Now that she was passing out of his life for ever the wrench was something that he could hardly bear. He did everything he could, though, to help her, and it was when Tom Matheson said, in answer to a question, that he and Nellie could walk to the town—it wouldn't kill either of them—that Jack offered to drive them there.

Tom rather quickly declined, then said he'd borrow the buggy and leave it at the Stars and Stripes; but it only held two comfortably, and Jack couldn't spare two days just for the pleasure of driving them over. So they set off alone and twenty miles farther on, in the darkest and dreariest bit of the road, when Nellie had the reins, Tom suddenly struck her a heavy blow with a loaded stick on the back of her head, and another and another; then, with a fiendish brutality, dragged her lifeless body to the plantation of pines at the left side of the road, hid it as well as he could in the heavy undergrowth, then entered the buggy again, and drove on to the Stars and Stripes—free, and safe to win the million of money.

II.

"He's a remarkably fine young fellow," said Mr. Dallas emphatically. "And I command you to accept him, Ermytrude. I fail to see what any girl could want more. Tom Matheson is young, handsome, ly. By the terms of my uncle's will you are to marry me—"

"Fortunately, no woman can be bound by a dead man's will," replied the girl, quietly. "My answer is the same as it was five years ago—I cannot marry you."

"Do you know that your father sold you to my uncle?" said Tom. "Do you know that your father was private secretary to Matheson Temple and forged his employer's name to a cheque—that my uncle was going to prosecute him and called at his house to tell him so? He saw you, Ermytrude, and in you, a child of eight, he seemed to find again his only child, dead many years before. You went to him and gave him a kiss, and chatted to him, and by the time your father appeared, shaken, white, and ill with the knowledge of his guilty deed, he had made up his mind to take you in settlement of the offence. Your father agreed, and the bargain is here set down in writing. There is his IOU for five thousand pounds also. I—yes, unless you marry me I shall take proceedings to recover that money at once."

"Oh, no; it cannot be true," she wailed, and yet, even as she spoke she knew it must be, for certain dim memories came back to her which until then she had forgotten. "You will have mercy—my mother is ill—any shock would have a fatal effect."

"I make no terms, unless you marry me," was the fixed answer, and she went out heavily.

"It must be 'Yes,'" she murmured, faintly; "but, oh, Heaven, save me! It will be worse than the bitterness of death to become your wife."

III.

"Yes, certainly you have fulfilled the conditions, Mr. Matheson, and we congratulate you," said the lawyers, as they shook their client by the hand; "you are a very fortunate man. I—did you contemplate doing anything for Mr. Temple, may we ask? As things are, you get all. You might like to offer him a lump sum—or an allowance—"

"Not one farthing," was the reply.

"Hem!" coughed the lawyers disapprovingly. "Not, sir, that he knew we should speak to you on the subject. In fact, so sure was he that he had only himself to depend upon that he is already in America—prospecting, I believe, for gold mines—"

Tom started and flushed guiltily. "More fool me," he growled. "I've seen something of that in my time, but it's all a delusion. What part has he gone to?"

"We had a line from him only today," replied the senior partner; "he is buying a share in a mine at a place with the outlandish name of Boroo, which he describes as being 'behind Klondike.'"

Tom gulped down something between a groan and an oath. As he rose up hastily and took his leave, he wished a thousand times that he had offered Temple a start in some profession in his own country, or even an allowance.

Next day he was almost himself again, and particularly disagreeable to everyone he came in contact with.

He hardly knew whether it was love or hate he felt for Ermytrude, only he had a savage delight in showing his power over her, and so, as she resolutely refused to let him kiss her, and kept him at a distance in spite of the engagement having embezzled heavily from his employer, he left a wife behind him—she was a pretty chorus girl from the Frivolity, and only died three months ago. In the meantime, and during her lifetime, he married a second time, a girl named Nellie Ryley, out West at Boroo. When the news of this legacy came to him he attempted to murder her, and left her for dead in a pine wood on the banks of the St. Lawrence.

"She was found, and life coaxed slowly back to the poor girl by the man who loved her most, one Jack Denton by name. Fate is a curious thing; it led me straight from here to Boroo. I identified Tom from a chance snapshot taken out there by the man who bought his claim, just as he set out with his wife to come home."

"I've—I've said a few foolish things, Dick," gasped Dallas, mopping his brow, wet with agitation "but I didn't mean them. If this tale's true, Tom is a blackguard and I'd rather you had my daughter after all. I suppose you can prove what you say?"

"It is proved," was the reply. "Tom was arrested an hour ago; he is in Wilkley Jail at the present moment on a charge of the attempted murder of Nellie Ryley, who, by the by, is now Mrs. Jack Denton. Denton married her directly he found out that her first marriage was null and void."

Then, as Dallas rushed out to find out the latest particulars of the case, Richard Temple took Ermytrude in his arms again.

"After the darkness comes light," he whispered, "after the storm peace. The inheritance is mine, but without you it would be valueless. Tell me you will marry me, darling."

"Oh, Dick," she replied, "what a very unnecessary question!"—London Tit-Bits.

HAWAII'S BIG VOLCANO.

Curious Relics of Lava It Has Left In the Forests.

Hawaii possesses one of the greatest natural wonders of the present day world—a live volcano as high as Vesuvius and twice its diameter.

Kilauea, on the island of Hawaii, stands thirty miles from the sea in a mountain range in which are three dead volcanoes and one partially alive. This last, called Mauna Loa, from time to time sends streams of lava down its slopes. In 1881 three streams burst forth from the sides of this mountain, and one of them came within three-quarters of a mile of Hilo, the chief city of the island. There have been several outbreaks of Kilauea in the last hundred years. In 1840 there was a brilliant eruption of lava, the light of which, it was said, could be seen a hundred miles away, while at the distance of forty miles one could read print at midnight.

Where the lava flowed through the forest it has left curious relics in lava arches, bridges and great vases. These vases were formed by the lava piling itself about some lofty tree trunk, burning away the wood within and killing the upper part of the tree. In the course of time seeds were deposited in the open top, filled with decaying bark, until now there is a gigantic lava vase, holding ferns and flowers and vines.—Exchange.

Fashion Hints

SEEN IN PARIS SHOPS.

Black and white veilings are chiefly in favor.

Long gloves are leaping into a new popularity.

Solid greens are promised a decided popularity.

Coiffures are going back to the Greek fashion.

Sleeves show more fullness at the top and less length.

The scarf of fashion is usually of the color of the hat.

Colors generally are less vivid and black is to be much worn.

Hair ribbons for girls are narrower, and the bows less conspicuous.

Everything that is not black or sombre now seems to be striped.

Veils as well as scarfs and shawls of black chantilly lace are smart.

Fillet and square mesh veils are beloved by the Paris woman of fashion.

Tunics are quite long and are edged with heavy fringe of silk or beads.

Hibbings are often made to match the gowns with which they are carried.

Every new gown with the high waist line has a sash or girdle of some sort.

It will be a brown winter in men's attire—with a general liking for soft hats.

Wide velvet ribbons have a vogue for hat trimmings, scarfs and sashes.

Facings of bright satin, silk, or velvet are popular on white or black dresses.

Already it is evident that hats and skirts of this season are to be far less eccentric than last.

Overwaists and regular waists for fall are mainly of the peasant or body and sleeve in one type.

The uncured ochre plumes is a newcomer in fashion, with already considerable popularity.

Black and white striped silk is an effective trimming for suits of the fashionable new ochre shade.

In dressy gowns it is thought that the high or empire waistline will again be popular since some of the latest models show that tendency.

Byron and Dutch collars both continue in favor. Jabots are especially popular in the lace varieties.

DAD KNEW.

During a history recitation in a Toronto Public school the teacher put the question:

"When was Rome built?" The first answer was from a youngster near the front, and his response was "At night."

"At night!" repeated the teacher. "How in the world did you get such an idea as that?"

"Why, I've often heard my dad say Rome wasn't built in a day," said the boy.

II.

"He's a remarkably fine young fellow," said Mr. Dallas emphatically, "and I command you to accept him, Ermytrude. I fail to see what any girl could want more. Tom Matheson is young, handsome, full of life and vigor, has a million of money, and, as he truly says, has adored you all his life."

"Father, I cannot marry him, because I love Richard Temple," replied the girl, in a low tone, which vibrated with the intensity of emotion, "and I have a strange prejudice against Tom. Years ago I tried to like him, when as children we played together at the Grange. He is cruel and deceitful. I—I cannot marry him."

"Then my curse be upon you," said her father, fiercely. "I absolutely forbid you to have any further communication with Richard Temple, and I command you to marry Tom Matheson. What is more, I'll make you do it."

"This is a free country. Even you cannot make me marry against my will," said Ermytrude, with a flash of spirit. "You may prevent my marrying the man I love, but no power on earth shall force me to marry Tom Matheson."

"We shall see," was the reply. "He has asked my permission to speak to you alone to-night, and I have given it. I am a ruined man—everything has turned out unfortunately. Unless you marry this young fellow and prop up the pillars of our falling house, we—I, your mother, and the boys—will all be sold up and become absolute beggars."

The girl sighed deeply. The picture was not exaggerated, but the simple truth; only her father neglected to add that all that dreadful state of their affairs had been brought about by his own wilful extravagance and heavy gambling—the probability being that, if Ermytrude married a millionaire who set her father straight on the wedding day, he would tumble in to quite as deep a pit in the near future.

Then Richard Temple came to make one last final effort to gain the girl he loved, and his own happiness.

"Sir," he said to Mr. Dallas, "you don't know the kind of man Tom Matheson is, or you would never dream of letting him wed your innocent daughter. He may have changed, certainly, during the three years he has been away, but—"

"I will not hear a word. You are a pretty fellow to find fault with a man behind his back—a relative too," broke in Mr. Dallas; but Richard Temple replied quietly:—

"He is no relative of mine, though we were both equally related to Matheson Temple. As for speaking behind his back, pray summon him here to hear all I have to say. I have already warned him that if he persisted in his suit to Ermytrude I should tell you the cause of his having to leave England so hurriedly three years ago."

"I will not listen. He is my chosen son-in-law; now go," replied the elder man, angrily and hurriedly, and Richard Temple bowed gravely and left the house.

Two hours later Tom Matheson was shown in.

"You know just why I've come, my dear," he began, insolently. "The love you rejected five years ago you will now receive different-

Next day he was almost himself again, and particularly disagreeable to everyone he came in contact with.

He hardly knew whether it was love or hate he felt for Ermytrude, only he had a savage delight in showing his power over her, and so, as she resolutely refused to let him kiss her, and kept him at a distance in spite of the engagement between them, he suddenly tightened the rein and insisted on an early marriage.

In vain she tried to hold out for the original date—all were against her. Tom had promised her father an allowance from the date of the wedding, and that made him eager in his future son-in-law's cause, and as usual the girl had to give way; where she had sacrificed so much a few weeks sooner or later could make little difference.

They were so poor—they wanted money so badly—it was the wickedest nonsense for anyone to pretend not to care for money. It seemed to Ermytrude, in those dark, wretched days of misery, that, so far as earth was concerned, plenty of money was the only thing that mattered. She had beauty, but what good had it ever done her? She loved and was loved; but love had only broken her heart.

The doctors said her mother was dying—nothing could save her but entire absence of worry, and a long change in some foreign land.

Her father groaned aloud as he put his hands in his empty pockets—her brothers and sisters all looked to her to save the family from utter ruin. How could she help herself? That was why she gave in at last and named an early date for the wedding.

It was within two days of that date that Richard Temple walked in just at twilight and catching her in his arms kissed her fondly—passionately.

"Don't, Dick, don't!" she cried brokenly. "In two days I shall be his wife."

"In two days you will be my wife, dearest," he replied, kissing her again, and as she gazed at him in startled wonder her father entered the room and a fierce growl rose to his lips.

"You back again, Temple, like a bad penny?" he cried, insolently. "Well, you are just in time to be present at Ermytrude's wedding."

"As I shall be the bridegroom—yes, I shall be in time," was the quiet reply.

"Confound you, no," broke in Mr. Dallas, bitterly. "She is to marry Tom Matheson, the millionaire, old Temple's heir, and I've had quite enough trouble over it already, so don't you try and upset things. You are the last man in the world I'd give her to."

"And yet," said Temple, quietly, "it is I who am my uncle's heir—I who am a millionaire. Tom Matheson has not one shilling in the whole world."

"Oh, Dick, is it true?" gasped Ermytrude, as she lifted her head from his breast. "You would not play with me—you would not torture me!"

Mr. Dallas's face suddenly whitened. Suppose anything cropped up to make this thing possible, why then he had simply ruined himself and all his hopes of gain.

"Speak!" he muttered, hoarsely. "Is—is Tom dead?"

"No; but he was a married man before my uncle died," was the reply, "and that, of course, precluded his chance of heirship. I should say twice a married man, for at the time he ran away from London

A Coin Worth Millions.

Somewhere in the world—possibly among the relics kept by some lover of the great Napoleon—there is a fortune, perhaps unsuspected. Among the coins Napoleon had minted were some millions of five franc pieces, and he determined to popularize these in an extraordinary way. In one of the coins, folded to a tiny size, was inclosed a note signed by Napoleon and promising the sum of 5,000,000 francs to the finder of that particular coin. Naturally everybody who changed a large piece demanded the new five franc coins in exchange and, as a rule, probed and dug and sounded the metal in eager search for the hidden note. But the years went on, and yet the note did not appear. Napoleon's plighted word is a sacred trust to the French nation, and today the government stands ready to pay the debt, when, with interest, is now worth many millions.—London Answers.

PLANT CIRCULATION.

Comparable With the Circulation of Blood in Animals.

It is generally known that plants have a circulation comparable with the circulation of blood in animals, but it is not so well known that their force of liquid propulsion is vastly greater than any animal's blood pressure, even the elephant's. The force of an animal's blood as it circulates through the largest arteries is incapable of raising a column of water over seven feet high, whereas the force of a plant's sap, even of a small vine, can raise a column of water from forty to eighty feet high, exerting a pressure of over two atmospheres.

The way this is shown in the laboratory is to tear off a small branch of a tree and fix it air tight into a rather large short tube filled with water. To the bottom end of the thick tube is attached a small thin tube filled with colored water and having its lower end immersed in a vessel of colored water. This experiment simply shows the rate of absorption of fluid by a plant. The colored water is seen to rise in the small tube at a comparatively rapid rate, an inch or so a minute. To show the height to which the pressure can force water, a tube has to be fitted into the bark of a plant and the root supplied with water.

Hales first showed this with a small vine, which he severed and to which he applied a tube. The fluid rose to over forty feet. De Candolle tried other plants and in one instance secured a height of eighty feet or over two atmospheres' pressure. The cause of this force was long considered due to capillary attraction caused by the hairlike tubes in plants. This failing to account for the enormous force developed, a microscopic examination showed that these vessels had a progressive contracting motion similar to that in the arteries of animals and that the explanation in each case was the same.

Thus the vitality or principle of life that allows this motion is in all cases the direct cause.

Hotel Insurance Against Robbery.

At a well known hotel in Venice it is the practice to charge guests 25 centimes per diem for insurance against fire and robbery, the amount covered for this premium being 1,500 francs. This is a very convenient arrangement, as robbery is far from uncommon in Italy.—London Truth.

Salt in Africa.

In central Africa the greatest of all luxuries is salt, long-continued use of vegetable food creating so painful a longing for that mineral that natives deprived of it for a long period have been known to show symptoms of insanity.

EXPLAINED.

A colored man was brought before a judge charged with beating a mule over the head with a club.

A member of the S. P. C. to A., who had seen him, called a police officer and had the colored man arrested.

Before the judge the culprit pleaded guilty and, after the judge had asked him what he had to say in explanation, he answered:

"Judge, I know that mule!"

Sentence was suspended.

FOLLOWED BY SILENCE.

Judge—Have you been arrested before?

Prisoner—No, sir.

Judge—Have you been in this court before?

Prisoner—No, sir.

Judge—Are you certain?

Prisoner, I am, sir.

Judge—Your face looks decidedly familiar. Where have I seen you before?

Prisoner—I'm the bartender in the saloon across the way, s'r.

SICK ROOM NOTES.

Sponges should be washed in warm water in which a small quantity of tartaric acid has been dissolved. This will keep them soft and of good color. Take care not to use too much tartaric acid, or it will spoil the sponge.

The best kind of flannel for a fomentation is a piece of soft old blanket, old flannel answering better than new. Remember to always dry the patient's skin thoroughly after removing one fomentation and before putting on another.

GOOD BUSINESS.

Ashley—"I see that Lawyer Black will accept no client who is not a merchant tailor."

Seymour—"Isn't that a rather strange procedure?"

Ashley—"Not in reality. Black claims he gets the most business from merchant tailors because they have new suits to try every day."

TIME FOR A CHANGE.

"I am the master of my fate," declared the man with the baggy trousers and ragged cuffs.

"Well," his weary wife replied, as she went on trying to find something in the pantry that was worth cooking, "I wish you'd put some other boss on the job."

QUITE SO.

Tim—Did you have a jolly time at the reception last night?

Jack—No; there was a young man present who tried to be funny.

It's surprising how many things a girl can learn at a boarding school that will never be of any use to her.

"John," said his wife, "I have lots of things I want to talk to you about." "That's good," answered Mr. Spender; "generally you want to talk to me about things you haven't got."

Dick—"You got engaged last week, old chap, didn't you?" Frank—"Yes, my boy, but that's all off now." Dick—"Why? Incompatibility of temper?" Frank—"Not at all—rather the reverse. She advised me to practise economy and I started by getting her an imitation gold ring!"

Tonic or Stimulant?

There is an immense difference between a tonic and a stimulant. Up one day, way back the next; that's a stimulant. Steady progress day by day toward perfect health; that's a tonic. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a tonic, a strong tonic. The only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. Do not stimulate unless your doctor says so. He knows. Ask him. Do as he says. J.C. With the opening of the bird shooting season the September number of Rod and Gun in Canada published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., gives a number of delightful stories dealing with days amongst the ducks, geese, woodcock and prairie chickens—experiences which will cause many a thrill to sportsmen reading them. Numbers will be able to duplicate, in remembrance, many of these published experiences, and in this way live over again red letter times in their histories. Variety marks this production, every lover of the outdoors, whatever his particular taste, receiving attention. The story of two young moose, one of a pet raccoon, the efforts of an amateur to trap a bear, particulars of the American bison, the Alpine Club's last camp and some dog lore show the manner in which the magazine covers the wide variety of Canadian outdoor life. The verses in this number are excellent, and the Bohemian ring of "Fishin's Good" will find an echo with many even of the most staid. "My Little Fisherman," with his wonderful story of the monster that got away appeals to the sympathies of all, while the "Evening Chorus" is equally good. The issue should be found with every shooting party this season.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AN ORIENTAL GARDEN.

It is Not Planted With Flowers, and It Has No Lawns.

A garden does not necessarily mean a collection of flowers arranged more or less symmetrically, with spaces of lawn, shelter of trees and paths hither and thither. There have been gardens that, beyond a terra cotta jar or two holding a rosebush or a flowering almond, have had no green thing within their gates.

I know of an oriental garden in Fez where white garmented Moors come in the cool of the evening to sit and listen to ancient stories that they know by heart, or to music that was old when the pyramids were new, or perhaps to look at a dancing girl or two taking soft steps while they smoke their nargiles, yet that garden is nothing more than a series of arches upholding walls beyond walls, toned a faint, mysterious yellow that is not yellow, but white, and yet not white, but rose. In the middle is a pool of water in a stone basin that looks blue because of the intense sky overhead and that shimmers with gold in reflections from the walls. In the corner stands a mighty jar full of strange scarlet blossoms, and rugs of deep color and intricate pattern lie on the sun warmed flags. There is always the fairy music of dropping water, and wonderful shadows move among the arches.

This place is a garden for all that it is so builded of man. The word court will not do for it.—Century Magazine.

FIGHTING FATIGUE.

Jacking Up the Tired System Without Using Stimulants.

If efforts to keep at work are continued in spite of fatigue the quality of the work is poor and the exhaustion inordinate. Students constantly make this error and do all sorts of things to keep awake to burn the midnight oil when if they would go to bed and rest they could accomplish far more in half the time in the morning with little or no fatigue.

Yet there are times when sleepiness and fatigue must be overcome without resort to stimulants which injure the judgment. The tired physician with a critical case, for instance, must have his wits about him, and it will aid him vastly to go to an open window every fifteen or thirty minutes to take a dozen or two deep inspirations of cold air. His exhaustion in the end will be great, but he can make it up later.

As a matter of fact, surgeons and others whose work requires the keenest perceptions instinctively choose the early morning for their best efforts, reserving the afternoon for "low pressure" tasks or recreation. That is, it is far better to so live that we do not need the stimulus of these extraordinary methods of respiration.—American Medicine.

A QUICKSAND.

Wishing to Avoid One, She Stepped on Another.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

When Helen White went abroad she bade adieu to her betrothed in these words:

"If anything happens to me, Joe, so that I never return I suppose you'll have another girl within six months."

"Oh, that's too long; make it three."

"You'll never be serious about anything."

"There are some things I don't wish to be serious about. It isn't best to go through the world thinking about what may happen. The happenings come soon enough without looking ahead for them. Besides, those we expect are apt not to come. It is those we don't look for that do come."

"You don't look ahead enough. I prefer before putting my foot down to see that I don't put it on a quicksand."

"And while you are looking for a safe place to step some one else will get ahead of you."

Helen started. It seemed there was something in these last words that had an especial meaning for her. They were standing near the gangway of an ocean liner among a crowd of those who were going on the ship and those who were going ashore. Joe Baxter held her hand in his for a moment, pressed it, looked feelingly into her eyes, turned and went ashore.

"I wish," she said to herself, "I hadn't undertaken it. But since I have I will not give it up."

Helen had been abroad a month when her letters to those at home, including her betrothed, suddenly ceased. The last one received was from Rome. She was an orphan with no very near relatives. Joe Baxter was far nearer to her than any other living person, and when a suspicion arose that she had been made away with he went abroad to look for her.

This, besides suffering the natural anxiety of a lover, was a hardship.

A Dime Better Than Two Nickels.

A professional panhandler approached a man crossing City Hall park and demanded a nickel, which the man good naturedly handed out, saying, "I suppose that goes for a glass of beer."
 "Surest thing you know," replied the panhandler unblushingly. "And, by the way, while we are on the subject, I have now in my possession two nickels. Would you mind giving me a ten cent piece for them?"

"I will on one condition," said the man, whose curiosity was aroused. "What's the answer?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," explained the panhandler. "If I have a dime I go into a saloon and ask for beer. I have a nickel comeback, which enables me to amble over to the free lunch counter and fill up. Maybe you don't realize that getting change over the bar gives a man a certain tone that doesn't belong to him, if he just coughs up a nickel."—New York Sun.

Rice in the Orient.

Rice is "wet," that grown for the most part in flooded land, or "dry," that raised on uplands. Its growth in those regions where civilization has penetrated least is pathetic. Parts of the east are still covered with virgin forest of tall trees. Underneath all is dark in heavy shade. Creepers twine up hundreds of feet and are all topped off with indescribable orchids, all hunting for air and sunshine. In the thick wood a suitable spot is chosen, for rice they must have or starve. Undergrowth is cut out and staked and hedged around to make a fence for the little rice farm.—Exchange.

When "Work" Becomes "Labor"

There's Something Wrong.
 Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Will Right It.

Thousands of Women feel just like this.

When it seems as if you simply could not bear up any longer it is high time to look for the cause of the trouble—and the remedy. In an astonishingly large number of cases the real cause of woman's misery is found to be constipation, and the remedy that always cures is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Neglect of the daily movement of the bowels, so necessary to health, soon poisons the whole system from the impurities retained in the body. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and lassitude follow, and often more serious female disorders are brought on or aggravated.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only regulate the bowels, but they stimulate kidneys and skin as well to throw off waste matter and purify the blood. The result is quickly apparent in the disappearance of the headaches and biliousness, and the return of health and vigor. Thousands of women all over the world owe their present good health to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

"HAVE YOU STOOD THE TEST?"

He was without means and endeavoring to make a place for himself in his profession. He could neither afford the time nor the money to make the trip. Nevertheless he used both, feeling it is duty as well as impelled by his feelings to go.

Helen had accused him of not looking ahead. Before sailing he showed the injustice of the accusation. He looked into her affairs. It might be necessary for him to spend considerable money on her account. For instance, suppose she had been captured by bandits and a ransom was demanded. He found that she possessed property producing a fair income, but before leaving she had made no provision whatever, so far as he could learn, in case of her death. She had simply directed her bankers to send her the income as it was paid to them as her agents. It would therefore be impossible for Baxter to raise any funds for her use.

Thirteen days must elapse before he could reach the place where she had been last seen. On the steamer he made the acquaintance of an elderly American gentleman, to whom he told the object of his visit to Italy. This gentleman, Mr. Alexander, realizing that Baxter needed to have his mind diverted from his trouble, introduced him to his wife and daughter, a girl of twenty. Mr. Alexander also offered in case a sum of money larger than Baxter could command was needed for purposes of investigation or ransom to advance the amount, looking to Helen White's estate for reimbursement.

The Alexanders took a deep interest in Baxter's mission and when they reached Rome and he began his inquiries were eager to hear what he learned. He found the hotel where Helen had stopped and her trunk, which she had left locked, and it had remained locked. She had gone alone one morning to Frascati, on the hills some dozen miles from Rome. There she was seen in the Aldo Brandini gardens, formerly the residence of Pope Clement VIII. Later she was reported walking on the hill back of this place. There was no trace of her after that.

The police informed Baxter that some distance back of Frascati there is a village consisting of 500 people, 450 of whom had been in jail for one offense or another. When persons are seen on the hill, especially foreigners, the Italian mounted police, riding two together, usually keep them in view, that they may not be attacked by some of these jailbirds. The police assumed that since Helen White had been up there alone and had either been murdered for what valuables she had about her or had been captured for ransom. No ransom having been demanded, there could be no doubt that she had been murdered.

Indeed, there was no other alternative. It is seldom that the mystery of a disappearance is so satisfactorily solved. Baxter was obliged to be content with it, and the Alexanders, who had come to take a strong sympathetic interest in him, persuaded him to divert his mind by making a brief tour with them. This, under the circumstances, was the best thing he could do. Together they visited Florence, Venice and the lakes of northern Italy. These localities, new to Baxter, were admirably calculated to withdraw his mind from the horror under which he suffered. The quaint, mediaeval town on the Arno, with its treasures of art; the city of water streets on the Adriatic, where under the moonlight hundreds of gondolas filled with pleasure seeking people congregate in sight of the doge's palace and the Lion of St. Mark's to listen to music, were surely calculated to draw the poison of sorrow and restore a normal condition.

Usually a man who has lost a mate feels that something has been taken away which he is eager to replace. To supply this need Baxter turned to Alice Alexander. Drawn to him through sympathy, a girl of a kind heart and high principle, she felt constrained by both to do all in her power to cause him to forget the tragedy of his lost love.

Later one evening while seated in a boat on Lake Maggiore Baxter asked Miss Alexander to tell him the story of and kindness of the Alexander family, of his hunt for traces of her, his conclusions, his tour with his newly made friends, his engagement.

"And now?" she moaned.

"And now I am placed as a judge on the bench. I have no right to be moved by aught except justice. While you were supposed to be dead another took your place. If I were a chattel she could not make good her claim against yours. But a man is not property. My decision is this: In order to be certain you took a risk and lost."

He walked away from her, but at the door turned and threw her a kiss. It was the only one she ever after that received from a man.

CORE OF THE EARTH.

One of the Enigmas of Nature That Science Cannot Solve.

Human beings know only a mere skin of the surface of the earth, not more than thirty miles deep, while the globe is 8,000 miles in diameter. There is probably no oxygen at all below thirty miles, and it is difficult to guess what are the elements within. Probably the heaviest elements form a dense core near the center.

It is in some respects astonishing, most alarming, that we are so completely devoid of any direct knowledge of the constituents of the vast mass of globe beneath us and really only know the merest film. A skin or membrane one-twentieth of an inch in thickness (the thickness of kid or little brown paper) spread over a ball a little more than a foot in diameter represents the proportion between the known crust of the earth thirty miles thick and the great globe itself.

We are dependent on inference and speculation for our notions as to the constitution of all that is beneath the mere skin of thirty miles thickness on the globe's surface. Even what is thrown up by the biggest volcanoes does not come from below this depth or tell us what lies hidden there.—Exchange.

Helter Skelter.

"Helter skelter" has been suggestively defined as a jingling expression vaguely imitating the hurried clatter of feet rapidly and irregularly moved. Most dictionaries, however, led astray probably by the ordinary orthography, have missed the true etymology of this phrase. It should be "helter kelter." "Helter" is an old word for "hang," probably, connected with halter, and "kelter" is used by old writers in the sense of "order" or the proper state. Thus Barrow, the divine, says, "If the organs of prayer be out of kelter how can we pray?" "Helter skelter," therefore, is literally "hang order" and means, "Oh, hang order; let us do it, or let it take its chance." Ben Jonson in "Every Man In His Humor" writes, "Helter skelter, hang sorrow, care 'll kill a cat," and Shakespeare, using it to express rush and hurry, says, "Helter skelter, have I rode to thee."

Horseradish as a Vegetable.

In Germany horseradish is frequently made into an excellent cooked vegetable which goes particularly well with boiled mutton or chicken fricassees. It is made as follows: Grate as usual and stew till tender in butter; mix well with grated Parker House rolls, one cupful of the latter to three of the horseradish, and boil up once more, adding a heaping teaspoonful of sugar. Served with very firmly jellied currant jelly, scooped out with a teaspoon and laid in solid little ovals like a wreath round the white mound of horseradish, this delectable dish looks almost as good as it tastes.—Suburbanite.

1000 ISLANDS AND ROCHESTER, N. Y.

through sympathy, a girl of a kind heart and high principle, she felt constrained by both to do all in her power to cause him to forget the tragedy of his lost love.

Later one evening while seated in a boat on Lake Maggiore Baxter asked Miss Alexander to fill the void that had been made vacant and become his wife. She accepted, and their betrothal was approved by the girl's parents. Then after a fortnight's ocean trip together the couple reached home and again took up the thread of ordinary life.

Just three months after Helen White had sailed for Europe Baxter, who had but recently returned, received a letter from her saying that she would be due to arrive on the day he would receive her letter.

It would be impossible to describe the sensation of a man in his position. After taking time to right himself from the effect of the squall that had struck him he resolved to hear Helen's story, then be guided by it in his future course.

When Helen White reached port and did not find Joe Baxter on the deck to receive her, her heart sank. She remembered that when she had accused him in case of her loss of replacing her within six months he had responded banteringly, "better make it three." She, too, remembered that it was just three months since her departure.

On the evening of her arrival Joe called. He did not exhibit the relief to be expected in one who had lost and regained a love; he did not take her in his arms, bestowing caresses in place of words checked by emotion. He stood looking at her as if she had returned from the spirit world.

"Oh, Joe!" she exclaimed.

"Explain."

"Have you stood the test?"

"What test?"

"Joe, dear, what I went away for was to test you. You know I always liked to be certain of everything and I wished especially to be certain of the man I would marry. I intended to disappear that you might show your constancy. O, Joe, do tell me that you have been true."

Baxter continued to gaze at her, but there was nothing in his expression from which she could derive any comfort. Presently he said:

"What became of you after you were last seen at Frascati?"

"I had a disguise with me which I put on, and, returning to Rome, took a train northward. I have since been in a small village in Switzerland."

Suddenly the hard look he wore disappeared and was replaced by one of sympathy.

"You have made an awful mistake!"

She whitened and waited for him to go on.

"You remember I told you that while waiting to find a secure place on which to step some one would get ahead of you?"

She sank in a chair and covered her face with her hands. Then suddenly starting up and facing him, she said:

"Tell me all!"

Baxter told her of his agony on learning of her disappearance. Knowing the reputation of the Italians of southern Italy, he believed she had met with foul play, but hoped she had been kidnapped rather than murdered. He told her of his trip, the sympathy

Foxglove.

In some places in England the foxglove is regarded with awe as a "witches' flower," the peasants saying that the witches use the bells of the blossoms as thimbles. In most parts, however, the "wee sma' folk that bode no ill" are the beings that "sweetly nestle in the foxglove bells," and in Ireland the plant is called the fairy cap.

BROKE UP THE HABIT.

A Woman Who Found a Simple Remedy For a Big Annoyance.

"What has become of those two children who visited you so often?" asked one west side woman of another. The other smiled discreetly.

"They are the children of my niece, and she was making a convenience of me. Of course I love the children, but I never allow myself to become much of a victim of imposition. My niece is an extremely gay young widow, and she does not like to take care of her children. She is fond of shopping, matinees, afternoon teas and everything, in short, which takes her away from home, and she got into a habit of sending her children over to my house for me to take care of whenever she wished to gad about. I decided it was time to break up the habit, for her own good and that of the children, as well as mine, so I did."

"I suppose that made your niece angry?"

"Oh, no; it couldn't. I never said anything about it. The last time the children came over I spent the afternoon teaching them verses from the Bible, and they didn't find it sufficiently entertaining. They never came back. Just how they managed to work it out with their mother I do not know, but I suppose they struck or begged off. Of course she could not object to what I had done, and it proved a very simple solution."—New York

VINDICATED.

Accused, He Acquired Means to Prove His Innocence.

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

Many years ago when New York was a comparatively small town, two men were at work over a set of commercial books in the office of a small store in Canal street. The older was a man of forty, the younger a boy of nineteen.

"Mr. Coulter," said the younger, "I can't make this trial balance come out right—will you help me?"

Coulter turned a crafty face toward his assistant. An idea seemed to be crystallizing in his brain. Then, leaving his books, he walked over to where Johnnie Brainard sat on his high stool and began work on the trial balance. An hour later it was finished, a very beautiful statement of red and black ink.

"What a good man you are, Mr. Coulter," said Johnnie. "I could never have done it without your help."

The other, making no reply, turned away and resumed his work on his own books. But the boy noted that his hand trembled.

John Brainard's salary was the only support of his mother, a widow, and several brothers and sisters all much younger than he. He was especially anxious that his work should be satisfactory because he hoped for a raise of salary that would somewhat lighten the burden resting upon his mother.

WAS DRAGGED OUT OF THE HOLD

The next afternoon a summons came for Johnnie to go to the office of his employer, Eben Huyser. The young accountant noticed from his chief's expression that there was trouble in the wind, and the first words confirmed his surmise.

"What have you done with the money you have taken?"

Half an hour later, after a vain attempt to extort a confession from the boy, Huyser sent out for a policeman and Johnnie was taken to the Tombs dropped by his employee, that in his trial balance he had endeavored to cover up a deficiency of some $12,000. At once it occurred to him that Coulter had used him as a catspaw to conceal a defalcation of his own.

John Brainard spent months in prison. During that time the wife of a man occupying the cell next to his came often to see her husband and concocted a plan for his escape. John being innocent himself, the woman had no difficulty in convincing him of her husband's innocence. She conceived a plan of liberating her husband by taking his place, he escaping in her clothes. In order to do this she required John's assistance. At the critical moment he must attract the warden's attention by pretending to have become ill. John consented, the scheme was successful, and the prisoner, Thomas Nolan, got away. Mrs. Nolan was very grateful to John and offered to assist him in an effort for his escape. But John declined to do anything that would look like a confession of guilt.

One day John was released. On inquiry he learned that Coulter had made good the money the assistant was charged with having stolen and had been admitted as a member of the firm. It was at his request that John had been released. The boy found his mother in a pitiful condition. And, worst of all, after the charge that had been brought against him there was little hope of his procuring a position. During the evening Mrs. Nolan, who had heard of his release, came to see him.

"I am an honest woman," she said, "but I am sorry to confess that my husband is not an honest man. At least he has not been honest, though I have secured his promise to live a better life in future. Had we not imposed upon you and thus secured your assistance he would have been tried, convicted and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. As it is we are going to a new country to begin life anew. Before going we wish to reward you for what you have done for us, and fortunately we are able to put you in the way of such reward."

"About a year ago the crown jewels of a European kingdom were stolen. The government has sought for them high and low and used every effort to trace the thief. My husband and a man named Taggart were the robbers of the treasure. My husband came to America to make arrangements for its transfer to this country. He was to bribe a customs official to pass the box containing the jewels without examination. He was also to provide a place for their concealment. But on reaching New York he was recognized as one wanted for a former offense and was arrested. This has spoiled the game. Taggart was to have sailed on the ship Pequot on a date that should bring him into this harbor within a few days. The European government has offered a reward of $25,000 for the recovery of the jewels. Intercept Taggart and you will have been repaid for your kindness to me and my husband."

On the receipt of this information John Brainard suddenly became a new man. If he could secure this reward he would be able to lift those dependent on him from suffering to comfort.

That was a day when ocean liners came over under canvas and required some thirty days to make the transit. Had the matter occurred today John Brainard might have feared that some one acting under information received by cablegram would get ahead of him. But there were no cablegrams in those days, and if a criminal secured an em-own purposes. Coulter, knowing that the pending suit would reveal his peculations, broke down and confessed. Soon after John's arrest some speculative investments Coulter had made had turned from ebb to flood tide and given him considerable funds. He then—generously, it was supposed—offered to make up the deficiency on condition that John was not prosecuted. The firm, being in need of capital, at the same time admitted him as a member.

An arrangement was made by which John withdrew his suit. Coulter was put out of the firm, and John was taken in in his place. Later he became senior partner.

AN ASTOR DEAL.

The Only Time That Old John Jacob Sold Real Estate.

"One of the most stringent real estate rules of the Astor family is 'never sell,' and only one sale is recorded in the entire life of old John Jacob Astor," said Niles F. Watkins, a real estate broker of New York. "In 1830 Astor tore down his house in Broadway, cleared the whole block from Vesey to Barclay street and built the huge Quincy granite hotel known as the Astor House, which was one of the first notable landmarks in New York and also one of the best paying pieces of property."

"A few days after it was finished the old gentleman and his eldest son, William, were walking through City Hall park, where the postoffice now stands, and stopped a moment to admire the building, the finest hotel in America at that time."

"'Top, that's a mighty fine building,' said William. 'I wish to gracious it was mine.'"

"'So?' answered the father. 'Well, Billy, give me $1 and you can have it.'"

"'Out came the dollar—a big silver dollar that is cherished by the family to this day—and within an hour the deed of the property was made out and recorded. This was old Mr. Astor's only sale of real estate in his life.'—Washington Herald."

A Solomon-like Decision.

A Rhode Island justice was called upon to determine the ownership of a brood of turkeys. The flock, consisting of fifteen young ones, was mothered by two hens, a white one and a bronze, and had been running for quite a time over two adjoining farms. The owner of the white hen declared that the turkeys were his, while the man who owned the bronze hen asserted just as positively that they belonged to him. The justice was puzzled. At last a witness came forward who swore that he had seen a dog chase the flock; that at the dog's approach the young birds flew up into a tree and the bronze hen took to the woods, but the white hen turned and gave battle to the dog. The justice thereupon decided that the owner of the white hen was also the rightful owner of the brood of young turkeys.—New York Press.

WHEN FILTH WAS DEIFIED.

The World Reverted Into a Period of Mental Sloth.

When Egypt, Greece and Rome were at the height of their ancient power their citizens made bathing a social function, a municipal duty and a religious observance. The public baths of these nations were magnificent architecturally and important as centres of hygienic and municipal sentiment. With the decadence of these countries, the world seemed to have reverted to a period of mental sloth wind, and the first words confirmed his surmise.

"What have you done with the money you have taken?"
Half an hour later, after a vain attempt to extort a confession from the boy, Huyser sent out for a policeman and Johnnie was taken to the Tombs, the then city prison so called since it was a copy architecturally of the tomb of an Egyptian king. There in his cell Johnnie after somewhat recovering from the shock, had time to think. It had become evident from words came over under canvas and required some thirty days to make the transit. Had the matter occurred today John Brainard might have feared that some one acting under information received by cablegram would get ahead of him. But there were no cablegrams in those days, and if a criminal secured an embarkation he was pretty sure that no one had been warned of his arrival.

What Brainard had to consider was to make good his capture without giving away his information to any one. He succeeded in getting himself appointed a deputy constable, then went down New York bay to quarantine and waited for the arrival of the man and the jewels. In a few days the Pequot was sighted. Her appearance confirmed Mrs. Nolan's story. Still, John had been twice duped by criminals, and he was not yet sure but that a new trap had been laid for him.

Brainard made the acquaintance of the health officer whose business it was to board incoming vessels and secured his permission to go with him when he made his inspection of the Pequot. His informant had given him a description of Taggart. He was small, thickest and an especial mark on him was the absence of a part of one ear, which he had lost in a fight with the French police. When the Pequot neared the quarantine station a boat bearing a yellow flag, the doctor and John seated in the stern, was pulled out to her and the two climbed a ladder that had been placed for them over the ship's side. Then the former made his medical inspection, while John began to inspect the passengers.

The work was not as arduous then as it would be among these several thousand persons coming in on an ocean liner today. There were but twenty in all. John saw no one on deck answering the description of his quarry, and on asking the purser if there were no more the officer counted noses and said that one man was missing. John's face fell. Had Taggart escaped? All hands were started on a hunt, and a short, thickest man with one ear nearly gone was dragged out of the hold, where he had gone to escape observation till he might find an opportunity to step ashore.

John showed his badge and made the arrest. Since there was no telegraph by which he could summon assistance on his arrival at the slip where the ship was to be docked he was obliged to wait till he came within sight of the Battery. Then the captain sent the message by signal. As soon as the ship was docked John turned his prisoner over to the police and his effects were placed in bond. In a bathtub with a false bottom the jewels were found.

It was months before John received the reward for his capture, but in time $25,000 was paid him.

Meanwhile he had been quietly working upon the matter nearest his heart, his vindication, and the day after the payment of the money Huyser & Co. were sued for false imprisonment and their books placed in the care of a custodian appointed by the court. Then Mr. Huyser sent for John to come and see him.

"What does this charge mean?" asked the head of the firm.

"It means that you imprisoned an innocent man, who at the time knew not which way to turn to exonerate himself. He is now about to move heaven and earth to prove that he was used as a cat paw."

"Who used him?"
"Your bookkeeper, Coulter, now a member of the firm."

Huyser sent for Coulter, who appeared pale and trembling. John told the story of how Coulter had assisted him in his trial balance and how he doubtless cooked it up to serve his their citizens made bathing a social function, a municipal duty and a religious observance. The public baths of these nations were magnificent architecturally and important as centres of hygienic and municipal sentiment. With the decadence of these countries, the world seemed to have reverted to a period of mental sloth and physical uncleanness.

As an authority on the matter puts it: "For a thousand years there was not a man or woman in Europe that ever took a bath, if the historian of these times, Michelet, is to be believed. The ancient love of the bath seemed to have disappeared from off the land. There was no Greece or Rome to hold up the ensign of cleanliness to the nations of Europe. Small wonder that the peoples of the continent became physical decadents, as indeed they were, in spite of tradition to the contrary."

"It is not strange that there came the awful epidemics that cut off one-fourth of the population of Europe—the spotted plague, the black death, the sweating sickness, and the terrible mental epidemics that followed in their train—the dancing mania, the mewing mania and the biting mania. Not only the houses but the persons of all classes reeked with filth and vermin. The bath was banished and filth was almost deified. Indeed, it was then thought that the sanctification of the body was only accomplished when that body was indescribably dirty."

One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam-Buk's favour is Mr. C. E. Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Here is his opinion of Zam-Buk. He says:—

"I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of Eczema on my ankle which had been there for over 20 years. Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had applied various ointments and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike everything else I had tried, proved highly satisfactory and cured the ailment."

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother men, and if the publication of my opinion of the healing value of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the relief of suffering caused by Piles or Skin Diseases I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures ulcers, abscesses, blood-poison, ring-worm, festering or running sores, bad leg, varicose ulcers, salt rheum, prairie itch, cuts, burns, bruises, baby's sores, etc. Fully tested. 50c box, drugists and stores. Refuse imitations.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT

IN CURING MANY DISEASES?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-lives"
—The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 97% water, 2% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-lives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-lives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.

O. Henry Was a Shade Smarter Than the Magazine Man.

A friend of the late O. Henry writes of him: "He was reckless in spending money and frequently gave elevator boys and bellboys five and ten dollar notes. But he wasn't 'easy' despite his financial carelessness.

"His friends recently narrated an incident showing the man's shrewdness. A magazine noted for 'slow pay,' they said, contracted with him for a three part story for which he was to receive $1,500. He got $500 advance before starting to work and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got $500 more and asked for the third $500 as an advance before finishing the tale.

"The editor in an effort to save money apparently declared that, after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than $1,000—this when he had the two installments in his office.

"'All right,' said O. Henry; 'I won't write the third one then.' And he didn't. He laughed at the editor.

"'Well, then,' said the latter, 'I'll run the two parts and then let our readers have a guessing contest as to how the story ends—and put up, perhaps, a $500 prize to the winner.'

"For a moment the author thought he was outwitted. Then he said: 'Go ahead, and I'll win the prize.' He intended to win it too!"—Boston Herald.

missions. — A certain gentleman set out for Japan and India his relatives gave him errands. One wanted an Indian shawl, another a silver Buddha, a third a chryselephantine carving, and so on, till the list of commissions was appalling. He agreed, however, to fill them so far as possible.

But when he returned he had executed but one of the nineteen commissions that had been given him. He had brought back only the chryselephantine carving. This he gave to one smiling cousin amid the disappointed looks of the other relatives. Why, the disappointed ones asked, had he executed that one particular commission and disregarded the rest?

The traveler smiled. "It happened," he began quietly, "that each of you had written your commission on a sheet of paper. On the second day of the voyage out I took all these sheets of paper from my notebook, opened them and spread them on my lap as I reclined in my steamer chair.

"The air was very still at the time, but suddenly a brisk wind sprang up, and every sheet was blown away except that of Cousin Max. Max's sheet was weighted down with the gold coin he had given me to pay for his carrying." — St. James' Gazette.

Missed the Squeak.

Some persons like one sort of shoe and some another, but the kind which was desired by Pierre, the French Canadian mill hand, has never enjoyed a wide popularity.

"Shoes for Sunday," Pierre stated to the young man who advanced to meet him as he entered the salesroom of the big shoe factory.

He then sat heavily down on one of the red plush seats and allowed the salesman to insert his feet in a pair of bright yellow shoes. When they were fairly on, Pierre stood, moved his feet this way and that, took a few steps and, shaking his head, sat down again.

"What's the matter?" asked the clerk. "Do they hurt you? Are they too tight?"

Pierre shook his head violently. "She no tight," he said, "but also she no talk. Shoes for Sunday must talk, talk, all the way up in church for to soun' stylish, see?" — Youth's Companion.

Oil of the Porpoise.

The porpoises killed in winter are the fattest and produce most oil. The largest size measure about seven feet in length, five feet in girth and weigh about 300 pounds. Such a porpoise yields from six to seven gallons of oil. The blubber of a big porpoise weighs about 100 pounds and is one and a half inches thick in summer and two in winter. The jaws of the porpoise yield a superior quality of oil. When hung up in the sun it readily drips away into cans provided for the purpose, the quantity of oil thus procured, however, being not more than half a pint to the jaw. The oil from the blubber gives an excellent light and is in demand along the coast for light-house use. It has no offensive odor.

Busy All the Time.

Little Howard came in the other day, crying and rubbing several bumps caused by a series of "butts" administered by a pet sheep.

"Well, Howard," said his sympathetic auntie, "what did you do when the sheep knocked you down?"

"I didn't do anything. I was getting up all the time." — Delineator.

Suicide by Swallowing Gold.

Suicide by swallowing gold is sometimes accomplished in China. The following is an authoritative account, written by a very learned Chinese for the Westminster Gazette, of how this much contested form of suicide is accomplished:

"In swallowing gold it is not loose gold leaf or gold dust that is swallowed, but a solid lump of gold, or even a gold ring, weighing about half an ounce. Gold is not at any time of a corrupting nature, but when a lump of it is swallowed and gets into the bowel it fails, on account of its intrinsic weight, to rise and surmount the convolutions of the bowels and can therefore never complete its passage. After two or three days it therefore sinks through the bowel and destroys life without any suffering."

THE SECRET OF HER POWER;

Or, A TRUTH NEVER OLD.

CHAPTER V.—(Cont'd)

Lady Usk was angry and roused. "Look at my poor little sister," she goes on. "What a life that brute Mersey leads her about money. All those dreadfully plain girls to dress and nothing to do it on, and yet if they are not all well got up wherever they go to he swears he is ashamed to be seen with them. You can't dress well, you can't do anything well, without spending money, and if you haven't money you must get into debt. That is as clear as that two and two are four. Whenever do men remember their own extravagances? You smoke ten cigars a day; your cigars cost a shilling or 18 pence each—that is 10 or 15 shillings a day; £5 a week, not counting your cigar ettes. Good heavens! £5 a week for sheer, silly, personal indulgence that your doctors tell you will canker your tongue and dry up your gastric juice! At all events our toilets don't hurt our digestion, and what would the world look like if women weren't well dressed in it? Your cigars benefit nobody, and only make your teeth yellow."

"Well, in a year they cost about what one ball gown does that's worn twice."

"I always wear mine three times, even in London," says Dorothy Usk with conscious virtue. "But I don't see any sin in spending money. I think it ought to be spent. But you are always dragging money questions into everything, and Boom says that the Latia person whom you and Lord Blanford are always quoting declares most sensibly that money should always be regarded as a means, never an end, and if it is to be a means to anything, must it not be spent before it can become so?"

"That's neither here nor there," replies her lord; "and if Boom intends his classics upside down like that he'd better leave 'em alone."

"You are never content. Most men would be delighted if a boy read at all."

"I don't know why, I'm sure," replies Usk, drearily. "Reading's going out, you know; nobody'll read at all fifty years hence; poking about in guinea-pigs' stomachs and giving long names to insects out of the coal-hole is what they call education now-a-days."

"Frederic Harrison has said very aptly," remarks Blanford, who is present at this conjugal colloquy, and seeks to make a diversion on it, "that the boast of science is to send the Indian mails across seas and deserts in nine days, but that tions of Orme tell me d'avance that I shall in any house of yours find the kindest of friends, the most sympathetic of companions. Say many things to your lord for me. I think he is only so discontented because the gods have been too good to him, and given him too completely everything he can desire." ("That's all she knows about it!" says Usk, sotto voce.) "Au revoir, dear Lady Usk. Receive the assurance of my highest consideration and believe in my sincere regard. Bien a vous."

XENIA PA SABAROFF.

"A pretty letter," says Blanford. "Many thanks," and he restores it to its owner.

"Buncombe!" says Usk. "Not a bit in the world," says his wife, with contempt and indignation. "She does not 'pose,' if you do."

"My dear George," says Blanford, "you are one of those thoroughgoing Britons who always think that everybody who doesn't deal in disagreeable remarks must be lying. Believe me, there are people who really see 'the side that's next the sun'—even in a crab apple."

"And deuced irritating, too, they are," says Usk, with emphasis.

"What a beastly bad day," one says to 'em when it's pouring cats and dogs, and they answer: 'Oh, yes; but rain was so wanted we must be thankful.' That's the kind of answer that would make a saint swear."

"You are not a saint, and you swear on small provocation," replies Blanford. "To look at rain in that light argues true philosophy. Unfortunately, philosophy is too often strained to bursting in our climate by having to contemplate rain destroying the crops. If we only had rain when we wanted it, I think the most unreasonable among us would view it with equanimity."

Rain is at that moment running down the painted panes of the Surrenden casements, and driving across the lawns and terraces of the Surrenden gardens. It makes Usk very cross; all the ensilage in the world will not console him for ripening corn beaten down in all directions, and young families of pheasants dying of cramp and pip in their ferny homes.

"Dig a big pit and cram your soaked grass into it; very well, I don't say no," he growls. "But what about your mildewed wheat? And where should we be if we had to undergo a blockade? I'm not her tones. "Yes, she is very handsome, but too pale and her eyes too large. You know those Russian women are mere paquets de nerfs, shut up in their rooms all day and smoking so incessantly—they have all that is worst in the oriental and Parisienne mixed together."

"How very sad!" says Blanford. "I don't think I have known one except Princess Kraskawa; she went sleighing in all weathers, wore the frankest of gingerbread wigs, and was always surrounded by about fifty grandchildren."

Princess Kraskawa had been for many years ambassador in London.

"Of course, there are exceptions," says Nina Curzon, "but generally you know they are very depraved, such inordinate gamblers and so fond of morphine, and always malades."

"Ah," says Blanford, pensively, "but the physical and moral perfection of English women always make them take too high a standard; poor humanity toils hopelessly and utterly exhausted, many miles behind them."

"Don't talk nonsense," says Mrs. Curzon; "we are no better than our neighbors, perhaps, but we are not afraid of the air; we don't heat our houses to a thousand degrees above boiling point; we don't gamble—at least not much—and we don't talk every language under the sun except our own, and yet not one of them grammatically."

USEFUL HINTS.

If nervous women would only drink more water they would not be so nervous, says a trained nurse.

For bleeding of the mouth or tongue a wash in cold water in which alum has been dissolved is very effective.

Common alum melted in an iron spoon over hot coals forms an exceedingly strong cement for joining glass, china or breakage of any kind.

A dash of vinegar added to the water in which eggs are poached will do much to prevent the eggs breaking in the cooking.

For the teeth nothing is better than five drops of lemon juice in a glass of water. It will remove the tartar and sweeten the breath.

In packing away hats see that they are not crushed in any way, and pack plenty of tissue paper around them to exclude any possible dust or light.

Small doses of cod liver oil are very useful for children who catch cold easily. They should be given two or three times a day, directly after food.

Children's undershirts should always be hung up by the shoulders and adults' skirts by the waistbands. It saves tearing the lace with the clothes-pins.

Turpentine mixed with carbolic acid and kept in open vessels about the room will greatly lessen the risk of contagion in scarlet fever, diphtheria, and kindred diseases.

To make celery sandwiches, chop one-quarter of a cupful of celery fine. Mix with one hard-boiled egg pressed through a sieve, and sufficient mayonnaise dressing of moisten properly.

To make strong buttonholes—Place a fine piece of muslin or lawn underneath the buttonhole and work it the same as usual. When it is all finished cut away the muslin close to the stitch.

To remove tea, coffee, cocoa or

HOW ONE WOMAN REGAINED HEALTH

Utterly Helpless and Friends Did Not Expect Her to Get Better.

The great fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they have restored to active health and strength hundreds of people when all other treatment had failed to cure, and who had come to believe themselves hopeless, chronic invalids. The case of Mrs. Henry Britton, 1284 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, Man., adds another striking proof to the truth of this assertion. Mr. Britton writes as follows concerning his wife's long illness and ultimate cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills: "It is a simple thing to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and yet it is difficult to express fully one's heartfelt gratitude for such a marvellous remedy, as they have restored my wife to health and strength after the best efforts of the medical fraternity had failed. For years prior to our coming to Canada, and since that time up to about three years ago, my wife had been subject to severe illnesses from what the doctors said was chronic anaemia. She was utterly and entirely helpless, and so weak that she had to be lifted in and out of bed for weeks at a stretch. The trouble, was aggravated by recurrent rheumatism and heart trouble. She had no appetite or strength for anything. I employed the best medical attendance and nurses procurable. The doctor gave her tonics and ordered beef tea and wine. The tonics and medicine would relieve her for a time, and then she would slip back once more into the old state—but worse if anything. Then we began giving her advertised remedies, but all seemed of no avail. One evening while reading a newspaper I happened to see an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It told the case of a young woman who had been a great sufferer from anaemia, and who testified to having been cured through the use of these Pills. The case seemed to describe very closely the symptoms of my wife, and although I had pretty nearly lost all hope of her ever being well again, I decided to get a supply of the Pills and urged her to use them. My wife was thoroughly disheartened, and said she expected it was only another case of money thrown away. However, she began taking the Pills, and I thank God she did, for after she had used them for a time, she felt they were helping her. From that time on her appetite came back, her color began to return, and she who had been looked upon as a helpless invalid began to take a new interest in life. She continued taking the Pills, and through them her health continued to improve, until at last we were able to heartily congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health. Some three years have since passed, and in that time she has never been bothered in the slightest degree with the old trouble. Her cure has astonished everyone who knew how ill she had been, and we acknowledge with heartfelt thanks our gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which literally brought her back to health from the brink of the grave."

WATERS OF FORGETFULNESS.

Why Weary Soul Would Not Stoop to Drink.

There was once a poor woman whose life had been such a bitter one that she wanted her memory taken away. He to whom she had given the love of her young heart had not fulfilled the promises of his youth; his weakness had developed crimes so that he was compelled to flee for his life; and the sons and daughters she had borne and brought up repaid her care and kindness with neglect and abuse, and at last, one by one had wandered far from her fireside. So the heart of the poor woman was broken, and she passed, a sad and desolate soul, down the dark valley of the shadow of death. She came at last to a dim river and asked the boatman to take her over.

"This is the river of forgetfulness," said the boatman. "Will you stoop and drink before you cross?"

The woman's face brightened. "Yes," she said; "I will drink; I will forget then that my hopes failed."

"You will forget that you ever hoped," replied the boatman.

The woman drew back, then she bent forward once more. "I will forget that I came to hate him so," she said.

"You will forget that you ever loved him," came the response.

The words seemed to stir a far away memory.

There was a long pause. Then the woman leaned forward to drink.

"I will forget that my little ones left my arms. I will forget how I wept for them at night. I will forget that they lost the right path and wandered away never to return to me."

"Yes," said the boatman, "you will forget that you ever pressed them to your bosom; forget that you ever felt the tiny fingers wandering caressingly over your face. You will forget visions you saw, the fond hopes you cherished, as you used to rock them to sleep at night."

"You may row me across," she said. "I shall not drink of the waters of forgetfulness."—Scottish American.

BABY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Five Doctors Failed to Relieve, but Zam-Buk Worked a Cure.

Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says: "My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were fearful, and the little one's plight was so serious that one time we feared her ears would be eaten off by the disease."

"We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her rubbing and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain, until we had had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good."

"As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."

For eczema, eruptions, rashes, tetter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases Zam-Buk is without

COULD END CONSUMPTION

SIR LAUDER BRUNTON SETS FIVE YEAR LIMIT.

Difficulties in Way, Although Methods of Prevention and Cure are Known.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the statement attributed to Sir Lauder Brunton at the annual Congress of the Royal Institute of Public Health at Birkhead, England, recently, that, if the knowledge now obtainable were "properly, scientifically and constantly applied," consumption would be as rare in twenty-five years' time as leprosy is to-day.

To the Westminster Gazette he afterwards said: "As a matter of fact I feel that I under-stated the case by saying it was possible to stamp out tuberculosis in twenty-five years. I believe it could be done in five. All things that are possible, however, are not practicable; and I am bound to confess that many practical difficulties stand in the way."

CAUSES KNOWN.

Asked for an explanation of his reference to the "proper, scientific, and constant" application of existing knowledge, Sir Lauder proceeded:

"It is now admitted that the Kock bacillus is the cause of the disease; and if we can prevent this bacillus from getting into man we stamp the disease out. Now, the avenues through which the bacillus effects an entry are mainly two in number—milk and dust. If a supply of pure milk can be secured we prevent the disease in children. We never can abolish dust, but we can make it free from germs by abolishing spitting, which impregnates the dust with the consumption bacillus to an alarming degree."

PREVENTION.

Give the country what it has not, a law for the supply of pure milk and another for the abolition of the spitting habit, and we shall be well on the road towards the stamping out of tuberculosis. In justification of my original assertion, I cannot do better than recall the fact that in one year we abolished rabies by killing off all the rabid dogs and preventing the importation of fresh cases. Whether the same treatment can be applied to tuberculosis cows or not is not for me to decide."

NOT INCURABLE DISEASE.

Sir Lauder is of the opinion that the present methods of treatment of tuberculosis subjects is yielding satisfactory results.

"I am quite certain," he said "that the sanatorium form of treatment is a good one; but, like all drastic remedies, it must be applied with great care. Patients are known to have greatly benefited by the open-air treatment; and it is no longer possible to argue that the disease is incurable, for we have been able to demonstrate, by subsequent examination, that people have completely recovered from the attacks of tuberculosis."

THE UNIVERSAL FAN.

In Japan It is in Its Glory—History Dates Away Back.

It is interesting to note how universal the fan is. Its history dates back to antiquity; indeed it is difficult to place the finger of research upon the time in the world's history when men or women or both did not use it. The word fan or van is derived from the Latin vannus, the Roman instrument for winnowing grain.

In Greece also the fan has a sacred as well as a secular use. But in Japan the fan is in its glory. The samurai, the man with the two swords, never marched to battle without his war fan, which served as a shield and a decoration. The departure from the flat variety is credited to an ingenious Japanese, who caught the idea of a folding fan from the bat's wing.

It is regarded by the Japanese as an emblem of life, and they consider it most appropriate as a gift. From peasant to Emperor it is a potent factor in the life of the people. They greet each other by a wave of the fan. The young bride takes a fan with her to her new home. Jugglers attain great skill with their fans. When a youth reaches manhood a fan is presented to him. He never parts with it, even though it might hamper his movements in the performance of his duty.

There are dancing fans, tea fans, camp fans of every size and material. In this Land of the Rising Sun the fans are bewildering.

TAKING FATHER'S JOB.

"Why should you beg? You are both young and strong."

"That is right, but my father is old and weak and can no longer support me."

THE DIFFERENCE.

A fool is unable to see his own faults. A wise man, seeing his own faults, is able to keep other people from noticing them.

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbus caused by irritating acids that act violently on the lining of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue and the delicate system of the child suffers under the drain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

ENGLAND'S ROYAL TRAIN.

Precautions Taken to Safeguard the King When Travelling.

The King of England is taken very good care of when he travels by rail. In addition to the ordinary communication cord, an electrical appliance connects every coach, including the guard's van, with the driver. Moreover, the ordinary vacuum brake is supplemented by a Westinghouse brake, so that if one should fail, the other is ready for use. In the last coach travels one of the company's chief officers and also the carriage superintendent. These have at their command a full complement of workmen of all sorts ready to meet any emergency which may happen. The King always travels to the north by night, and the train which is made up at the point of departure travels over the various companies' lines unbroken to its destination. There is no changing from one train to another. At the contact of two systems engines and guards are changed, but never the passengers. So there is after all, some advantage in being a King.

The Real Liver Pill.—A torpid liver means a disordered system, mental depression, lassitude and in the end, if care be not taken, a chronic state of debility. The very best medicine to arouse the liver to healthy action is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They are compounded of purely vegetable substances of careful selection and no other pills have their fine qualities. They do not gripe or pain and they are agreeable to the most sensitive stomach.

UNOBSERVING.

The flies that are now in your kitchen and dining room were probably feasting on some indescribable nastiness less than an hour ago, and as a single fly carries many thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body, it is the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating this worst enemy of the human race. Wilson's Fly Pads kill flies in such immense quantities as cannot be approached by any other fly killer.

DR. E. J. KENDALL, Co. 56 Enosburg Falls, - Vermont.

From India come constantly evidences of the nationalist movement which is giving the British government so much grave concern. At Dacca more than two score men are to be tried on the charge of conspiring to subvert English rule in the great province. The prisoners include educated men, collegians, journalists, philosophers, and thinkers. The land is full of rumors of conspiracy and uprising. Dacoity exists in many places, and Calcutta is harried with stories of a landwide society embracing all castes and religions, the object of which is the downfall of British rule at all costs.

The government and its police are busy everywhere, but the complex Indian nature baffles them at most points. Mere thuggery could be extirpated, but this new movement with its ramifications into so many conditions of society is too elusive for ordinary police control. Police seizures have revealed the fact that the nationalist leaders are in correspondence with certain members of parliament, although it has not yet been shown that any of the latter have been carried away by their emotions as was Keir Hardie several years ago. Most of them appear to be seeking for information, and getting it in large quantities.

One member, J. Ramsay Macdonald, has been travelling over India investigating the movement for himself. A number of his letters have appeared in the London Chronicle and they treat of certain phases not usually commented on in the dispatches. According to Mr. Macdonald the movement is closely bound up with a literary and artistic revival, not unlike the Celtic one in Ireland. Bengal, for instance, he says, is idealizing India and translating nationalism into religion, music, poetry, painting, and literature. The Bengalese are splendid agitators; they prepare men to be led, but no leader is visible, nor does he seem to be forthcoming. Nevertheless the movement goes forward with astonishing rapidity, flowing down from the higher castes to the man in the hillside furrow. Books, newspapers, ballads, and hymns are spreading broadcast the seeds of nationalism, and missionaries in the remote mountain districts report that little children at the services will strike up the Marseillaise or Carmagnole of the nationalists, and the singers, large and small, are transfigured and shaken by the emotion inspired by the patriotic airs.

The Bengalese political dacoits have taken their inspiration from a native romance which depicts the dwellers of forest and plain going to fight for Mother India under the leadership of fanatical monks. And so with books for the learned

THE CROPS ARE A SUCCESS

What the Dominion Interior Department's Agents Report.

A despatch from Ottawa says: According to reports on western conditions sent by the agents of the Department of the Interior to the Superintendent of Immigration, the crops this year are after all a success.

In spite of the very early spring, the long dry spell through the summer, and the late heavy rain, grains, roots and fruit promise to be a paying crop, though not so good as last year. Through the dry summer months it was feared that crops would be a failure, and in some places bush fires raged and caused much alarm. In August, however, heavy rains set in and changed conditions for the better.

Harvest began generally about the first week in August, and has continued favorably, most of the grain now being in stooks, some stacked, and thrashing in progress. The weather just now is rather unfavorable, but rain and frost have done no harm. Some farmers have begun ploughing and disking for next year's crop.

The demand for farm hands has been good and still continues. In many places men are impossible to get. Wages average $20 to $45 per month and board, or $2 to $3 per day and board for very good men. Railway men will be required for some time yet at excellent wages.

Market prices are high, and there is a good demand for all produce offered; some new wheat has been sold. Farmers seem to have plenty of money, and no complaints are heard. Transportation conditions are satisfactory, there being plenty of cars to take the grain to the elevators, and roads are good.

All the mines are working double shift, and dealers have plenty of coal and wood on hand. Farmers have not yet begun to lay in their winter supply, but there is absolutely no fear of any shortage, and the outlook for the coming winter is bright and promising in every way.

LIGNITE AT COCHRANE.

Discovery Made While Boring for an Artesian Well.

A despatch from Cochrane says: There is great excitement here over the discovery of lignite coal during the boring of an artesian well on the property of the Cochrane Hotel. The common opinion around town is that the deposit here is very much better than that up in Mattagami River, which caused quite a little excitement this spring. The coal was discovered at about one hundred feet. Only small samples can be brought to the surface, as the pipe which is being sunk is only four inches in diameter. If anything should come of this discovery the T. and N. O. Railway Commission will be the only ones to benefit, as for all the land which they have sold the deeds are for the surface rights only, they holding any mining rights.

KILLED WHILE AT PLAY.

Little Boy Used Door as a Plaything and Was Killed.

A despatch from Teeswater says: A sad accident occurred here about 5 o'clock on Monday afternoon, when Charles, the six-year-old son of C. R. Campbell, was killed while sliding down a door upon which his father had been carried home a short time before. Mr. Campbell is a C. P. R. conductor on the way-freight, and while at Wroxeter on Monday afternoon was about to step from the top of one car to another when the cars parted and he fell between them, breaking his ankle. A door was used to carry him to his car and from the car to his home on his arrival here. The door was left on the steps at the front of the house, and his little son was using it as a slide. The little fellow fell and struck the back of his neck on the door, and died in a very short time.

en route to Ottawa. "They have been pessimistic for some time," he said, "but the crop has fallen far below the worst expectations. It will not be a quarter of last year's yield. No one seems to know why."

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.

A Ruthenian Laborer Then Shoots Himself.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: After firing two revolver shots at his wife and rushing from the house, believing her dead, Hawrylo Tracz, a Ruthenian laborer, aged 45, shot himself through the heart in the woodshed of their home on Stephen street at 1 o'clock on Monday. Tracz died instantly, but the woman will recover. They quarreled over family affairs, the woman having got into trouble in the Police Court through stealing from the C. P. R. yards near their home.

A WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

Mrs. J. M. Brown Hanged Herself in Montreal Hotel.

A despatch from Montreal says: The body of a woman, who registered at the Corona Hotel on Tuesday at Mrs. J. M. Brown, New York, was found there on Wednesday night hanging by a strap attached to a hook in a bathroom door. The woman was fully dressed and was wearing her hat, and life apparently had been extinct for some time. Nothing is known of the woman at the Corona, and little was seen of her after she registered.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The figures available at the Sanitary Bureau show that during the present cholera epidemic there have been 191,076 cases, with 88,716 deaths, throughout the country. On Friday Khabarovsk, seat of the General Government of the Amur and capital of Primorsky Province, Siberia, and Nikolavsk in the same province, were officially declared to be within the cholera zone. In the week ending Sept. 17 there was a total of 4,412 cases and 2,071 deaths. In the last six days there have been 301 new cases and 83 deaths in this city. ### TRAPPER BLED TO DEATH.

John Sims, a New Brunswick Hermit, Had Feet Shot Off.

A despatch from St. John, N.B., says: To bleed to death far from human habitation was the fate of "John the trapper" a few days ago. John Sims for the past seven years had lived in a small hut near Lepreux and existed by hunting and trapping. He is said to have a wife and daughter at Liverpool, but he shunned company and no one knew anything of his antecedents. Wednesday a boy who sometimes took him provisions went to the hut, to find him sitting bolt upright with both feet shot off and quite dead, with his long rifle across his knees. He had bled to death, with no chance of summoning aid.

The Bengalese political dacoits have taken their inspiration from a native romance which depicts the dwellers of forest and plain going to fight for Mother India under the leadership of fanatical monks. And so with books for the learned hymns passed from mouth to mouth, music and painting, the propaganda goes on, waiting for a leader. Will he come? And if he does, will England's material power be able to stamp out the fires which he and his fellows have lighted?

Much has been said lately about scientific agriculture and intensive cultivation. Not a little is being done to improve cultivation and increase the yield. But farmers all over the world will hear with pleasure that even the British Association for the Advancement of Science is giving serious attention to these problems.

At its Sheffield meeting this year two savants announced "the most important agricultural discovery in fifty years"—namely, the discovery that there are micro-organisms that spoil and destroy the soil as pathogenic germs attack and injure human and animal bodies. There are bacteria that fertilize and stimulate plants, and there are bacteria that kill these useful organisms. The bad and noxious agents may in turn be attacked and destroyed, thus saving the soil and leaving the field free to the beneficial organisms.

At the same meeting several scientific experimenters presented results of the application of electricity to wheat, vegetables and fruits. Surprising indeed are these results, for they indicate that the yield per acre may be increased substantially by the use of electric wires and currents properly directed.

Science can do much for the farm in several ways. It can add to its prosperity and comfort, and it can make farming interesting and attractive to ambitious young men and women entering active life. "Back to the soil" will acquire a new meaning in the light of such scientific discoveries and suggestions as we have indicated.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Thirteen-year-old Boy Committed at Gretna, Manitoba.

A despatch from Gretna, Man. says: Deidrich Hiebert, aged 13 was committed for trial on Wednesday morning at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering Isaac Hiebert, his cousin, at the village of Schonweise on September 4th. The only evidence directly connecting him with the death of his cousin was that of a Mennonite woman Mrs. Giesbrecht, who swore she saw Deidrich running away from the house where the body of the dead boy was found.

BIG SEIZURE OF NETS.

Fish and Game Overseer Makes a Good Haul at Brockville.

APPLE CROP A FAILURE.

Nova Scotia's Yield Will be Hardly 25 Per Cent. of Last Year.

A despatch from St. John, N. B., says: The Nova Scotia farmers are greatly disappointed in their apple crop, said Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, who passed through the city on Monday night,

APPLE EXPORTERS SCORED

Shipments Have Often Arrived at Montreal in a Rotten Condition.

A despatch from Ottawa says: J. A. Ruddick, dairy and cold storage commissioner, reports as follows concerning apple shipments from Canada:

"Several shipments of early apples have been made to Great Britain during the past month. Our inspectors report some shipments in ordinary cars arriving at Montreal in a heated, over-ripe, and even rotten condition. In view of the arrangement between the department of agriculture and the railways, whereby shippers may obtain iced cars at ordinary rates for the carriage of fruit intended for export in cold storage, it is amazing that such a complaint can be founded on fact. Some of the oldest shippers are the worst offenders in this respect. The direct loss for such neglect or ignorance falls on the shipper or owner, but the indirect loss from injury to the reputation of Canadian apples reaches every apple grower in Canada, and it is about time that the careless, slipshod operator should be given to understand that he has no right to jeopardize the interests of an important industry in this irresponsible manner."

FORTY-TWO WERE KILLED

Trolley Cars Crash Together in a Head-On Collision.

A despatch from Fort Wayne, Indiana, says: Forty-two passengers were killed and seven were seriously injured in a head-on collision between two interurban cars on the Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley line on Wednesday. The wreck occurred seven miles north of Bluffton at a sharp curve. The cars in collision were a northbound local car crowded to the steps, and a southbound extra car from Fort Wayne. They met while both were running at high speed.

The collision is said to have been made by a misunderstanding of orders for the southbound train extra to take a switch near Kingsland. The motormen of the two cars did not have time to set the brakes when they sighted each other. The heavily-loaded northbound car was crushed, and the bodies of the dead and injured were strewn on either side of the track amid the wreckage. The screams of the injured men and women following the crash of the cars brought the neighboring farmers to the scene. Conductor Spiller, of the southbound car, was unhurt, and ran back toward Kingsland and flagged a car which was approaching the wreck at full speed and would have plunged into it. Wrecking cars and physicians were rushed from Fort Wayne and Bluffton, and the bodies of the dead and the injured were conveyed to hospitals in the two cities.

Manitoba.

A despatch from Brandon, Man., says: Three men, giving the names of James Carson, John Newton and Dan Welsh, arrested at Oak Lake on Wednesday, had in their possession the greater part of $4,000 worth of jewellery stolen from a store in Hamiota the previous night. The men are apparently professional burglars, and are believed to be responsible for most of the numerous burglaries that have terrorized western towns for several weeks past. They were arraigned here and remanded for a week, as other members of the gang are still at large. The men under arrest are heavily shackled and under a special guard.

GIRL BURNED TO DEATH.

Several Guests Barely Escaped With Their Lives in Hotel Fire.

A despatch from Schreiber, Ont., says: A Finnish girl named Patmi was burned to death in her bed and several guests barely escaped with their lives, when the King Edward Hotel here was burned to the ground on Wednesday night. Miss Moore, an elderly woman working in the kitchen as helper, was burned severely and may not recover. A French girl named Cadet was badly hurt when she jumped from the second-story window. The hotel was owned by John King of Fort William, and was fully insured.

CHLOROFORM ON PILLOW.

Serious Charge Against a C. P. R. Brakeman.

A despatch from Regina, Sask., says: Charged with attempting to chloroform a lady passenger on C. P. R. eastbound train, No. 2, on August 8 last, William Patrick Lynn, a C. P. R. brakeman, was on Friday committed to stand his trial by Magistrate Hefferan at the barracks of the Mounted Police. The victim of the alleged offence, Mrs. Blanchflower, was travelling with her husband, Assistant Paymaster Blanchflower of the British navy, from Vancouver to Montreal, and, according to the prosecution, was occupying a berth by herself when the attempt to chloroform her was made somewhere between Medicine Hat and Swift Current.

The date of the unveiling has not yet been announced. The monument bears the following inscription: "This monument has been erected by the Government of Canada to Laura Ingalls Secord, who saved her husband's life in the battle of these Heights on October 13, 1813; who risked her own in conveying to Captain Fitzgibbon the information by which he won the victory of Beaver Dams on July 24, 1813."

ONTARIO PEACHES IN LONDON

Brisk Demand for Fruit from Jordan--- Tomatoes Will Sell Well.

A despatch from Toronto says: Having arrived in London in excellent shape, a consignment of Ontario peaches, grown at Jordan Harbor, are now on sale on the Covent Garden Market. The fruit was selected and shipped from the Government Experimental Farm at Jordan Harbor by Mr. P. W. Hodgetts, head of the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture. On Wednesday Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, received a cablegram from M. N. B. Colcock, Ontario's agent in London, stating that the peaches had arrived in fine condition, and were being eagerly sampled by dealers. The London newspapers have commented very favorably on the enterprise of the department and the excellence of the fruit.

Peaches have been shipped from South Africa to London with great success, and Mr. James is of the opinion that at least five thousand baskets will be shipped from Ontario to London this season. A representative of one of the leading commission houses of London is now at Jordan Harbor for the purpose of gathering information concerning Ontario's fruit wealth. The tomatoes grown in the Niagara district have been a revelation to him, and he says that if they can be offered for sale in London in the same condition as they are sold on local markets, tomatoes will be in great demand in London.

FLIES ACROSS THE ALPS

Peruvian Aviator Falls to Ground Under His Machine After Triumph.

A despatch from London says: Señor Chavez, the Peruvian, who holds the record for high flying, on Friday flew across the Alps by the Simplon Pass from Brigue, Switzerland, to Domodossola, Italy. He was competing for the Milan Aero Club's prize of $15,000 for a flight from Brigue to Milan, ninety miles, but his triumph was marred by an accident as he alighted. As he descended rapidly from a height of 9,000 feet, his Bleriot monoplane overturned, apparently owing to a gust of wind at the last moment, and he fell beneath it, breaking both legs. There is every likelihood of his recovery. The actual distance by road from Brigue to Domodossola is forty miles, but Chavez cut off a long corner near the south end of the Simplon Tunnel, thus reducing his distance to thirty-five miles. Brigue, from which he started, is 2,245 feet above the sea level, and the top of the Simplon Pass is 6,592 feet above the sea level.

Which is Your Choice ?

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete ?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather.

They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair.

The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

Which ?

The dampness which destroys lumber only intensifies the strength and hardness of Concrete.

You can impair a wooden trough with comparatively little use; but it takes a powerful explosive to put a Concrete water tank out of business.

Which

is your choice—expense-producing Wood, or money-saving Concrete?

We'd be glad to send a copy of our book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete,"—Free—if you'll ask for it. It tells the many uses of Concrete in plain, simple language—tells how to make

A discussion will follow in which an opportunity will be afforded for anyone to ask questions relative to the question, and an expression will be taken to decide whether or not a Local Option Campaign shall be commenced in Napanee and a vote taken at the coming elections in January. If it is so decided, officers will be elected and organization for the work will take place. A collection will be taken at the door at both the Sunday afternoon and Monday evening meetings to defray the expenses of the representatives. It is to be hoped that there may be a full house to listen to these speakers so that the decision as to whether there shall be a campaign or not may not fall upon the shoulders of a few.

The death occurred on Friday last of Melissa J. Glass, relict of the late John J. Hambly, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Howell, Gretna, aged sixty-nine years and ten months. A family of three children survived. They are Irvine Hambly and Amos A. Hambly, of Little Creek, and Mrs. Howell, of Gretna; also three sisters, Mrs. English, Londsdale; Mrs. Fitchett and Miss Martha Glass, of Sudbury, and two brothers, Irvine Glass, Palace Road, and Alexander Glass, Lethbridge, Alta. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, to Riverside cemetery.

Everybody likes an old fashioned minstrel show, and relish it the same as they do the coming of the circus with its smell of sawdust and and red lemonade, and if Guy Bro's. Big Minstrels which appear at the Opera House, Saturday Night, don't carry you back to the old days and make you crack your face, there is something wrong with you. Coupled with the old time minstrelsy, with a modern entertainment of the latest ballads by sweet-voiced vocalists, there is up-to-date vaudeville, and a superb band and orchestra. If you see the street parade at noon, and a free concert in the evening, you will get an idea of the merits of this company.

They all speak of Simkins' Steel Range Cook Stove in the highest terms after trying it. If they do not I will take it away from them. It will save one cord of wood the year round, out of three cords, also one ton of coal out of three tons, and give better results. It will not cost you anything to try this stove. I will put it in your house at my risk and expense, and take it away cheerfully if you don't want it. It is entirely of new design with double damper drafts at each end of fire pot. ## Latest Models in Hats at Doxsee & Co's

Some one said the ladies' hats for this autumn were going to reach a rational proportion, but it appears the fair sex are not yet prepared to relinquish the umbrella size headwear. Although modifications are being introduced, as evidenced by the display made by Doxsee & Company, Saturday. The suit hats this season are small by comparison with the dressy models and are largely along the beaver and velvet order with the use of plumes, osprey, wings, buckles, etc. Our attention was drawn to a very handsome hat, large mushroom brim, rolled up a little on the left side, back covered on the outside with black silk plush, faced underneath with white satin edged with black lace. The trimming consisted of a band surrounding the crown of white willow plumes finished with a mount at the left side. Another very much admired was a large drooping one covered with silk and velvet collapsible crown, willow plumes in the prunell shades. Children's millinery were also given special attention. One of these a little White Beaver, high crown, drooping brim, trimmed with scarlet velvet ribbon and berries. The small hats are high crowns, the large ones medium. Persian tapestry is very much used. Gold and oxidised trimmings are very popular. The shades are black, white, champagne, king blue, prunell, old rose, all shades of green and royal purple. The shapes all droop well down over the face and head.

The September number of "THE ATHLETIC WORLD" magazine has just reached this office. In up-to-date sport affairs and illustrations it is strikingly stronger than the August issue, which created such a favorable impression as a Canadian athletic and outdoor periodical, covering all branches of sport in Canada, with a liberal number of sport happenings over the world generally. We predict a full measure of success for "THE ATHLETIC WORLD" in its able efforts to espouse the cause of good sport in this Dominion.

At the meeting of the town council on Monday evening by-laws were passed authorizing the construction of sewers on Dundas street, Bridge and Adelphi street, John street, and Dundas street west. All these sewers excepting the Dundas street intercepting sewer are to be constructed by day labour at once. Tenders are called for the main sewer. All sewers are to be constructed on local improvement plan. Debentures will be issued and the cost charged against the properties benefitted, the payment to extend over a number of years. The town pays a portion of the cost of each sewer and about half the cost of the main sewer. With the completion of these sewers the town will have a fairly complete system to which further extensions may be made at any time, and by extending the payment over a number of years the cost to the properties benefitted will not be burdensome though anyone desiring to do so will be allowed to pay their share before the debentures are issued.

Lennox Farmers Win.

The farmers of the good old county of Lennox are by no means afraid of competition when they go to make exhibits outside of their own county.
The following clippings taken from the Picton Gazette's report of the Prince Edward county fair held in that town last week speak for themselves:
T. D. Creighton, Elm Shade Stock Farm, Napanee, showed a fine herd of registered Ayreshires and received seven first, five seconds and one third prize. No official tests have been made of these cows but they have yielded as high as 60 pounds of milk per day on grass. Mr. Creighton also had about one dozen fine Berk pigs on exhibit.

Mr. Irvine Hamby, Napanee had a herd of 8 of his registered Holsteins, prominent among them being a fine bull, Cora De Kol's Pieterje's count, 4 years old, sired by County Echo De Kol. Victoria Maud with a fine record of 2350 lbs, never officially tested, also her daughter, Victoria
Burke, June record 2352 lbs, milk, were on exhibit. Victoria Burke made 27 lbs butter in 7 days by official test. Mr. Hamby was also showing Orange Snafford, whose 3-year-old record of milk was 65 lbs. per day.
Four calves of splendid equality bred from these cows, completed the herd.
He secured two firsts, two seconds, and one third prize.

Mr. J. F. Dawson, Odessa, showed a fine flock of Shropshire sheep. Mr.
Dawson had already carried off a goodly number of prizes at Belleville Fair, and 1st over all breeds for best flock at Harrowsmith.

Mr. Wesley Dawson, Switzerville, who has been an exhibitor at Picton Fair for over 30 years was present with some beautiful Southdowns.

Mr. John Valentine, Violet, also an old exhibitor, was present with Oxfords and Leicester. He made a fine showing of grain in the palace as well.

Mr. C. W. Neville, Switzerville, showed Oxfords and Leicester.

Chambers and Brown of Napanee exhibited a magnificent imported Percheron that attracted universal attention Sutton, by name. He was steel gray in color and stood 16 1-2 hands high, weight 1840 lbs.

Chambers also showed a jet pluck imported Percheron, Ruget, and a pure white one Kleber also imported, also a two-year-old and yearling,
registered stock, 1st in their class.
Mr. Chambers carried off the red ribbons on brood mare and colt and on heavy draught team, all registered stock. When he started from the fairground there were many red ribbons fluttering and his horses made a pretty showing.

Dr. G. G. Membery, Adolphustown has returned to the old Loyalist home to engage in the rearing of thoroughbreds. He showed his imported clyde mare Valetta, a beautiful two-year old that made one long to pet her.
She weighed 1520 and deservedly received the red ribbon. His other, Rosebud, also imported weighed 1490 lbs and took first prize in the two-year-old class.

sprained foot. She had the misfortune to stumble and fall, with a baby in her arms, over some obstruction as she was coming off of the boat at Kingston, when on her way here for a visit. The baby was unharmed.

Mrs. A. C. Warner has gone to Montreal to visit her daughter, Mrs. S. O.
Martin.

Mrs. Bartles, Sr, Miss Bartles and Mrs. Gillen and young son, all of King-

THE MANTILLA.

A Spanish Woman Answers the Question, "Why Do You Wear It?"

The writer once asked of a well known lady of the Spanish aristocracy who was seated in the box of the president of a corrida in Madrid, "Why do you wear a mantilla?" and the fair duchess replied: "Because we all wear a mantilla at a bullfight or at any truly Spanish function. It is the proper thing to do, and we do it."

A little later as I strolled among a group of aficionados I ventured to ask a woman of the people over whose head and shoulders was also thrown a mantilla why all Spanish women, to whatever class they belonged, wore this national headgear, if it may be called thus.

This woman was sitting in the open air, and I was thinking that a large straw hat would have protected her better from the burning rays of the sun and been quite as picturesque.
She replied in that droning, warm tone
so typical of the Spanish: "Well, I happened to have often thought of this, and I think the reason why we all wear the mantilla is because we Spanish women are most careful about our hair. We think the chief charms of a woman are her eyes and her hair. And, as you may see, we all have splendid, thick, lustrous hair, and we are supposed to have, many of us, fascinating eyes. Now, why should we hide our elaborately arranged hair under a hat and conceal our eyes in the shade cast by the brim of a hat?"

No doubt this woman was right. Parisian elegance to the Spanish women of the upper classes may have its attractions, but they, as their less fortunate compatriots, all agree that beautiful hair and expressive eyes are more important. * * * And both of these may be cultivated—London Mail.
